War Summary of The Latest Events

The battle of the Somme has been resumed, and in the first day's fighting the Germans have captured the village of Villers-Bretonneux, which lies eight miles east of Amiens on the St. Quentin road. The battle began with an artillery bombardment of great violence, directed against the entire British and French front between the Somme and Avre. This was followed at 6.30 Wednesday morning by an infantry attack, which was repulsed all along the front. Concentrating their efforts upon Villers-Bretonneux, situated on a ridge overlooking the Somme Valley, the Germans resumed their attack with stronger forces, which were preceded by three tanks. Severe fighting took place in front of the village throughout the day. Sir Douglas Haig's report states that by evening the Germans had gained possession, but that the fighting was continuing. The enemy attacks to the north and south of Villers-Bretonneux were repulsed with loss. On that part of the battlefield north of the Avre held by the French the Germans made gains at Hangard, where they penetrated to the eastern outskirts of the village which French troops are desperately defending, and in the woods to the north of the village midway between it and Villers-Bretonneux. South of the Avre the enemy's assaults were shattered. The battle still continues.

Villers-Bretonneux, the enemy's new advanced post, stands upon a ridge that rises to a height of about 340 feet above sea level, and commands a view of Amiens over the tree tops of the woods of Blangy and L'Abbe, lying upon the western slope of the ridge. The woods are doubtless coveted by the enemy for gun positions. Heavy howitzers located in them could throw shells into Amiens from pits sheltered in the forest from the Allies' birdmen. The wooded land is fortunately still in the hands of the British troops, and to the south of it is a higher ridge even than that upon which Villers-Bretonneux stands. This Gentelles ridge is about 370 feet above sea level, and in the interval since the first phase of the battle for Amiens it has undoubtedly been strongly fortified. It will have to be captured before the Germans proceed farther west along the Amiens-St. Quentin road.

On the Lys battlefield the enemy begins to lose ground. Sir Douglas Haig reports the recapture of an advanced post near Festubert taken by the enemy on Monday. The Germans in the position offered strong resistance and lost heavily. Some prisoners and four machine guns were taken. At Robecq the enemy tried to regain the ground they lost two days ago, but failed and withdrew, leaving eighty-four prisoners behind them. In forming the landing party got on the Mole, and that "these fell into our hands, some alive, some dead." Marines who formed part of the landing party have been interviewed in Kentish ports and officially congratulated on their gallantry. The Berlin report is deliberately intended to conceal the importance of the actions, on the Flanders coast from the German read-

A bulletin from Amsterdam tells of the publication of a press report stating that the German Minister to the Netherlands has left the Hague for Berlin, and that the Dutch Minister to Germany is, on his way from Berlin to the Hague. This, even if true, does not necessarily mean a breach of diplomatic relations either over the use of Dutch shipping by the Allies or the refusal of Holland to give passage for sand and gravel en route to the German lines for use in the construction of concrete "pillboxes" and gun positions. The diplomats may be returning for the purpose of consultation because of the limitation of telegraphic facilities. There is no doubt that an ugly feeling has been stirred up in Germany against the Dutch because of failure to make a big row over the appropriation of their shipping by the Allies. Germany has as many enemies, however, as she can tackle just now, and the Dutch will not be driven into the camp of the Allies by design. If they are forced to abandon their neutrality it will be because of the stupidity of Prussian diplomacy.

The enemy threat against the Russian Black Sea fleet was not an empty one. So long as that fleet remains in being German power in the Black Sea will not be secure. After the capture of Odessa by the Germans the Russian warships, manned by Revolutionary crews, withdrew to Sebastopol, where they are still supposed to be. The Germans followed after them by land. It is now officially announced that German troops operating in the Crimea have reached Simferopol, and have thus cut the railway uniting the Crimean peninsula with the mainland of Russia. The Germans are now 35 miles northeast of Sebastopol, but there is still time for the Russian warships to take refuge at some of the Black Sea ports east of the Sea of Azov. The Russian Black Sea fleet would be a great prize for Germany, but the Bolsheviks are likely to sink the ships or blow them up rather than turn them over to the enemy.

begins to lose ground. Sir Douglas vanced post near Festubert taken by the enemy on Monday. The Germans

At Robecq the enemy tried to regain the ground they lost two days ago, but failed and withdrew, leaving the Nieppe Forest sector also the British secured some prisoners by minor enterprises. The enemy in concentrating his efforts once more on the Amiens operations is doubtless diverting his reinforcements to that part of the battlefield. Without fresh divisions he will not care to tackle the Belgian ridges.

The Berlin official report on the operations at Zeebrugge is a more than usually mendacious document.
Aerial observation by British aviators Wednesday established the fact that there is a clear break of twenty yards in width at the inner end of the Mole, where the sunken submarine was blown up. The German report states that "beyond the damage caused to the Mole by a torpedo hit our harbor works are quite undamaged." Berlin tells of the sinking of five British cruisers "close off the coast," leaving the German reader to draw the inference that they were sunk by German gunfire instead of by their crews to block the harbors attacked. At Ostend, a British Admiralty report says,
"a sunken object blocks the greater part of the channel in the harbor."
Another enemy untruth is that only

THE "WHY" OF LICENSING

Food dealers, large and small, are being placed under license in Canada.

"How can that help me" asks the consumer, naturally.

Licensing keeps down profiteering.
Every license is required at stated periods to make reports concerning his business. Most of these men are upright and patriotic; some, like Hamlet, are "indifferent honest".

But the LICENSE is the only way of catching the UNSCRUPULOUS. It is the one weapon that in all the warring countries has been found to be the terror of the EVILDOER in business. If there is a SUSPICION of undue profit, an examination of books will be ordered. The LICENSE gives the power of the SHOWDOWN.
Licensing controls profits; with profits controlled, prices are only such as will encourage production.

If unfair profit is discovered the license may be suspended or cancelled.
And out the profiteer will have to go —for NO LICENSE, NO BUSINESS.

Keeping down excessive profits is the surest way of checking the rising price of living in Canada. A fair profit must be allowed the middleman, as the chief distributor in this vast land, or he will slide out of business. Then our last stage would be worse than the first, for it would mean starving in a land of plenty.
We should have food in the Dominion without the necessary means of local distribution.

"Price fixing" is only arbitrary
but LICENSING gives the CONSUM-ER something which protects him from excessive PROFITS and, at the same time, gives the Retailer a means to average his profits, with fairness.

THE LICENSE IS THE THING.

N.C.I. ATHLETICS!

Something new in connection with N.C.I. Athletics was inaugurated on Wednesday afternoon, February 27th, when the girls of the N.C.I. met in A.L. to discuss the probability of a series of inter-form basket ball games. Five teams were arranged and it was with some difficulty that the Commercial Room was prevailed upon to compete. This made up 6 teams, consisting of: A.L., B.L., C.L., A.M., B.M. plus Upper School, and the Commercial. With our good sport "Locky" presiding, it was easy to arrange a schedule, by which the games would start the following night, Thursday February 28th.

To start the pot a-boiling B.L. beat A.L. by a narrow margin of 9-8. Lacking the assistance of their champion forward, Margaret Nyles, Commercial was overcome by the C.L. Dreamers in which "Lizzie Gleeson starred.

The Hustlers of A.M. overwhelmed Upper School in the final game of the evening. In the first half, both teams checked back well and showed a nice combination at times. But in the second half, the Hustlers forged their way to the front and held their opponents there during the rest of the game. Representatives from all forms were on hand and provided plenty of encouragement for their favorites with cheers and yells. This was, of course, continued throughout all the games.

The next day of the series, Wednesday, March 6th, proved successful but uneventful, A.M., Commercial, C.L., winning respectfully over B.L., Upper School, A.L. "Dreamers" dangled for the first time at the short end of the score, taking a beating of 29-9 from Upper School. On the same day A.L. accepted sportingly a trimming from A.M.

The next Monday the Hustlers rapped out a victory over the Dreamers of 22-20, and the Commercial downed A.L. The axe fell heavily on A.L. when Commercial put it over them on Wednesday, March 13th, and Upper School was put out of running entirely when whipped by C.L. in a score of 36-30.

But the event of the season was in the game between the Commercial and the "Hustlers." To everyone the feeling was tense before it started and the excitement grew as the game progressed. The score of baskets was 58-15 but the score of bruises and bumps was a thousand each. The way those girls battled around the old Gym. was an eye-opener. There could be no "bat-him-over-the-eye" stuff, but slams into the walls, cracks over the shins and crashes that sent players headlong were a plenty. At the end of half first both teams were pretty well done for, and Billie Johnston, lightning defence of the Hustler team was knocked out. At last Hester May was induced to play during second part but the Hustlers were decidedly lost.

PUBLIC NOTICE

There have been complaints made to the Council from time to time alleging that there was improper or less weighing of cattle and hogs on public weigh scales belonging to the Corporation. The Police and the Committee of the Council has the matter under investigation some time and have carefully tested the market and station scales and believe that both scales are absolutely correct. The Committee has also given such instructions as they believe will prevent any cause for dissatisfaction in the future. The Committee believe part of the dissatisfaction has been, not because there was any or tangible cause or complaint, simply because there was not the full confidence between some of the buyers and some of the sellers should exist. The buyers appear to be anxious to give just and weights and on several occasions complaints have been made the, upon investigation, appears to be with the seller hastily or less weighing his produce before giving it to the public scales or ed at the weights and was then satisfied because the public scales showed a lesser weight. There must be mutual confidence between buyers and the committee believe with instructions already given there will be in the future no cause of complaint.

Yours truly,

CE AND MARKET COMMITTEE

The score of baskets was 58-15 but the score of bruises and bumps was a thousand each. The way those girls battled around the old Gym. was an eye-opener. There could be no "bat-him-over-the-eye" stuff, but slams into the walls, cracks over the shins and crashes that sent players headlong were aplenty. At the end of half first both teams were pretty well done for, and Billie Johnston, lightning defence of the Hustler team was knocked out. At last Hester May was induced to play during second part but the Hustlers were decidedly lost.

The finishing of this game made it a tie for the championship, between the Hustlers and Commercial. This was decided to be played off on Wednesday, March 20th. Before it began Captain Winifred Perry of the Hustlers re-arranged her team, putting Billie Johnston centre and herself defence, practising at odd times. This proved to be a successful move but did not win for them the game.

During the first half the Commercial kept the advantage, but in the latter period the Hustlers bucked up considerably, all players doing their worst. This completed our whirlwind series, terminated a struggle between the Hustlers and Commercial and decided the championship in favour of the latter.

During the exams the Hustlers entertained the lady teachers and the champion team at "Pete's." A banquet was arranged for after Easter, speeches and toasts prepared, but two days before, the "Commercial" surprised the rest of the school by refusing to attend. The cause was inquired into and it was found that certain citizens of the town had signed a pledge, by which they promised to attend no place where refreshments are served during April.

This of course took the wind out of our sails and the affair was dropped. It certainly was discouraging to the rest of the teams but we hope to arrange something on the same style in the near future.

If the girls in the N.C.I. continue to qualify themselves thus, with the assistance of Miss Carmen Mills, who has coached and refereed us the whole year, we need not be afraid of going behind in our teams next fall.

THE "WHY" IN PRICE FIXING

"Why can't the Canada Food Board fix prices?"

Because no Board, no Government, can MAKE men do work that brings no profit. "Money makes the mare go."

No price of any commodity can be "fixed" steadily so long as COST OF LABOR can't be fixed. It has been found that prices have at times had TO BE RAISED TO BE FAIR. Fixed prices must always be above normal.

If the price of wheat were fixed too low production would drop and the farmer would quit.

If prices of some foods were too low to encourage production they would disappear from the market. The burden would then fall on the remaining food and their price would go up. THIS IS A FACT IN CANADA TO-DAY.

THE ALLIES NEED FOOD. PRICE FIXING CANNOT WIN A VICTORY.

The only remedy within reach to-day is in saving and economizing the present stocks of food, and in DOUBLING, TREBLING and, if possible, quadrupling, this season's crop.

Prices will drop when there is food enough for ourselves and the Allies.

The Red Cross Society

A special meeting of the Executive Committee will be held in the Council Chamber, Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock sharp.

Patterson's Jubilee Singers gave an excellent entertainment last Thursday evening, when the Armouries was filled, many standing throughout the entire evening. The excellent programme was received with hearty applause, each member of the Company showing splendid musical ability. The handsome sum of $92.25 was realized for our Society.

"With my blackboard at the front", will be the subject of the lecture to be given by Miss Ada, Ward, the eloquent English speaker, who comes to Napanee on May 29th. In this lecture Miss Ward gives a masterly insight into the varied experiences of the soldier in and behind the trenches.

We are again indebted to the ladies of Aarolphustown for the Hospital supplies given to us on Saturday.

A gift of $5.00 from Miss Mae Steacy, one of $5.00 from Mrs. Lydia Bertram and 3 pillows from Mrs. Robert Meyers have been gratefully received; and the splendid donation of butter from Mrs. Snooks realized a handsome sum.

The handsome sum of $63.20 was given to us by the Red Cross workers of Hayburn and the Pines, and not the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church, Hayburn, as previously stated.

A box of 72 pairs of socks, was sent away last week, and an appeal has come for bed socks, a number of which will be made on Saturday. Let each one of us attend the work-meeting so that a shipment can be made early in the week.

Send the boys at the front a "Kodak" picture of familiar sights around the old home. It will cheer them up more than anything. Kodaks and supplies are sold in Napanee only at WALLACE'S.

RICH WILL CONTRIBUTE

Larger Income Taxes Are Expected In the Dominion of Canada. It Is Probable That the Business Profits War Tax Act Will Be enacted by Union Government.

OTTAWA, April 23.—The delivery of the annual financial statement and the opening of debate thereupon will be the outstanding event of the present week of Parliament. The budget speech will be made by Hon. A. K. MacLean, Acting Minister of Finance. It will show that ordinary expenditures were kept during the fiscal year ended March 31st well within ordinary revenues. While the revenue exceeded a quarter of a billion dollars, ordinary expenditures amounted to less than $150,000,000. Capital expenditures were, of course, swollen by disbursements for war purposes, and the net debt of the country increased some $300,000,000 during the twelve months. It is expected that the budget will call for any tariff changes of outstanding importance. As to taxation measures, it is understood that the Business Profits War Tax Act will be enacted, and it has been asserted that the Income Tax Act will be amended to place the taxation upon the large incomes upon a parity with the United States taxes.

While the budget may not call for changes in the tariff the budget speech is expected to contain some statement upon the present trade situation. Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, is taking up in Washington the question of adjusting the balance in trade with the United States. It has been said that as a result of the conference measures reducing Canada's unfavorable trade balance in the United States may be announced. Furthermore it has been reported that those measures may include restrictions upon purchases from the United States and there is an order paper of the House of Commons a bill to authorize the Government during the period of war for three years afterward to control exports and imports. These subjects will of course come under discussion during the budget debate.

There are still questions likely to provoke considerable discussion in Parliament. These include the proposed loans to the Canadian National and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways. The Government's plan for dealing with indebtedness of the Canadian Northern, the bill to consolidate and amend the Railway Act, and the solution empowering the Speaker of the Commons to censor the Hansard report of the debates of that body. At the same time satisfactory progress is being made in dealing with the legislative program of the session. To-morrow will be the last day upon which private members' motions and bills can be brought up for discussion in the Commons. The Government has promised another opportunity to discuss the subject of tithe in Canada, introduced by W. Nickle, of Kingston. Other private members' business will, however, be before the House again this session, and the remaining Government legislation and estimates, it is believed, can be disposed of in time for prorogation by May 24th.

ATTACKED AMERICANS

Sammies Face Their First Se Fighting.

PARIS, April 23. — Fighting between Franco-American troops and German forces in the vicinity of Seicheprey, northwest of Toul, the Germans Saturday launch strong attack against the French American positions, continuing throughout the night. The Waite statement says the French suffered nearly all the ground won by the Germans. American fighting in this sector, the announcement adds, repulsed the Teuton assaults on their lines.

Twelve hundred German troops, the largest number ever concentrated against the American troops for an offensive operation, were hurled against the American positions on a one-mile front of Renneres Forest, northwest of Toul, after a terrific bombardment of gas and high-explosive shells.

The enemy succeeded in penetrating the front-line trenches and taking the village of Seicheprey, after furious hand-to-hand fighting which was still going on at 11 p.m., the American troops recaptured the village and most of the ground lost in the early fighting.

Germans were taken prisoner, many airplanes, flying at a low altitude, attempted to disorganize American fighting men, but, twenty aviators were brought down by the others driven off.

The Germans suffered 100 casualties, and the American remained virtually intact.

The capture of 133 American soldiers and 25 machine guns by Germans is claimed in the official report from German headquarters. German storm troops, it is also declared, advanced to a depth of kilometers (about a mile and a half) into the American line at Seicheprey. The Americans, statement adds, sustained losses.

German Officers Lead Men.

With the British Army in France, April 23.—German officers are leading their troops in the assaults, taking the places of non-commissioned officers, who heretofore have used almost invariably for front work. Their detention in the during previous fighting has part of the German scheme for conservation of the lives of the who are responsible for the plan of campaigns. TAXES ARE INCREASED

Great Britain Gives Proof of Financial Strength.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Demonstrates Amazing Stability of the Nation When He Introduces the Largest Budget in the History of the World—Overseas Dominions Are Praised.

LONDON, April 23.—Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in introducing the budget in the House of Commons Monday, said it was the largest in the history of the world, and he desired to present the situation as briefly as possible. His anticipations as to the assistance given to the allies by the United States had been fulfilled. Despite this assistance, the British loans to the allies in the past year were $505,000,000. The United States had advanced to all the allies $950,000,000.

"It is only necessary for us," said the Chancellor, "to lean on the United States to the amount the other allies lean on us. In other words, we are self-supporting."

He had been in communication with Secretary McAdoo on the subject of these complicated loan transactions, and with Mr. Crosby, head of the financial mission to Europe, who was on the point of returning to Washington to consult his Government.

"I have made certain suggestions regarding advances to the allies," continued the Chancellor, "which, if adopted, will lessen our burden considerably without in any way increasing the total obligation to the United States."

Giving the figures of the revenue for the last fiscal year, which amounted to £707,234,565, a large increase over the preceding year, he said that this was very gratifying, but that the real test of the financial position would come when Britain ceased to rely upon borrowing.

The Chancellor expressed the Government's appreciation of the hearty co-operation on the part of the Canadian Government in assisting to finance the war. He considered it possible that the alteration of the arrangement with the United States in the method of making advances would result in loans to the allies being reduced to £300,000,000 and to the Dominions £50,000,000. He pointed out how small the advances to the Dominions had been during the war, showing how great was the desire, not only in Canada, but in the other Dominions, to carry on the war out of their own expenditures.

The additional taxation proposed, said the Chancellor, would in the full year be equivalent to sixty-six per cent. of the ante-bellum revenue from taxation. The financial strength of the country after three years of war was greater than anyone could imagine, and was an amazing testimony to the financial stability of the nation.

The principal features of the new taxation proposals announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer Law follow:

Income tax is to be raised from five to six shillings in the pound.

The tax on earned incomes up to £500 remains as before, two shillings threepence on a pound. Between £500 and £1,000 it has been raised to three shillings. From £1,000 to £2,500 the tax will be five shillings threepence.

The supertax is to be four shillings sixpence on the pound instead of three shillings sixpence and to be in-

NEW THRUST EXPECTED

Germans May Try Great Turning Movement.

Troops Are Now Being Massed in Readiness by the Enemy, and the Allies Are Preparing for New Onslaught, Which Will Have as Its Objectives the Capture of Vimy Ridge and Arras.

LONDON, April 23.—Events along the battle-line in France and Belgium seem to be shaping themselves for a resumption of the great German offensive. It is probable that the coming week will witness two great turning movements attempted by the Germans. One probably will pivot on the village of Roeq, northwest of Bethune, on the southern side of the salient driven into the allied lines back of Armentieres. The other is expected to develop at or near Mesnil, north of Albert, on the north side of the Somme salient.

The purpose of these movements will be to cut deep into the allied lines on each side of the promontory that projects out into German-held territory and terminates on the old Arras-Lens front. The Germans have attempted two great frontal attacks on the defences of Lens and Arras, but they have been repulsed with terrible losses. These losses were inflicted upon the enemy before he reached the stronger allied positions in that sector, and since the second defeat at Festubert and Givenchy, the Germans have not dared to take up the task of attempting to drive the Canadians from their positions along Vimy Ridge and on each end of that great natural bulwark before Arras.

A telegram to Reuters, Limited, from British headquarters in France says:

"The Germans are apparently continuing to mass troops on the line of Bailleul and Neuve Eglise on the north and around Dernicourt on the south. An early resumption of the heavy fighting would not be surprising, but it must be remembered that the longer the Germans defer striking the more ambitious their blow is likely to be. In yesterday's minor fighting operations, the English counter-attacked north of Aveluy Wood, and are reported to have restored the positions which the enemy attacked the night before."

The British lines are holding firm on the northern salient in spite of the fact that those on the low ground east of Ypres are again subjected to the grueling fire from the heights which they once before have withstood for months without flinching.

British forces advanced slightly between Arras and Albert Saturday. British troops also drove the Germans from some of their advanced positions northwest of Bethune in the neighborhood of Robecq.

Hindenburg, in his big drive, is stalled ten miles east of Amiens, more than 85 miles from Paris. The greatest advance made by him in this Pleadry drive was a little more than 35 miles.

Balked in his march on Paris, the German commander started for the Channel ports, via Hazebrouck, on April 9. He is blockaded four miles east of Hazebrouck, and more than 25 miles from Dunkirk, the nearest port. His farthest advance in the Flanders thrust has been about 12 miles.

Apparently, the allies have thrown in only enough of their reserves to

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

Winnipeg, April 23.—The cash grain market was quiet and uninteresting to-day, and the volume of business was exceptionally small, owing to the light offerings. The demand for cash oats of all grades was good, with spreads unchanged. Cash barley was weak. The offerings were slightly heavier than on previous days. The future markets closed ¼c higher for May oats and ¼c higher for July. Barley, 2c lower for May, and 1½c lower for July. Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $3.79½; No. 2 C.W., $3.75½.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, April 23.—The Union Live Stock Market was characterized by a great deal of strength yesterday, all classes of good cattle selling well at an advance of from 25c to 40c for the heavy steers and heifers and good butchers, while the medium class were relatively 25c higher all round. Considering the quality of the cattle, very few extra choice cattle offering, the market was stronger has promised another opportunity to discuss the subject of titles Canada, introduced by W. F. Eble, of Kingston. Other private members' business will, however, not be before the House again this session, and the remaining Government legislation and estimates, it is believed, can be disposed of in time for prorogation by May 24th.

ATTACKED AMERICANS.

Germies Face Their First Serious Fighting.

PARIS, April 23. — Fighting between Franco-American troops and German forces in the vicinity of Icheprey, northwest of Toul, where the Germans Saturday launched a long attack against the French and American positions, continued throughout the night. The War Office statement says the French recovered nearly all the ground overrun by the Germans. American troops fighting in this sector, the announcement adds, repulsed the Teutonic assaults on their lines.

Twelve hundred German storm troops, the largest number ever concentrated against the American troops for an offensive operation, were hurled against the American positions on a one-mile front west of Renneres Forest, northwest of Toul, after a terrific bombardment of high-explosive shells. The enemy succeeded in penetrating the front-line trenches and taking the village of Icheprey, but after furious hand-to-hand fighting, which was still going on at nightfall, the American troops recaptured the village and most of the ground lost in the early fighting. Three Germans were taken prisoner. German airplanes, flying at a low altitude, attempted to disorganize the American fighting men, but two enemy aviators were brought down and others driven off.

The Germans suffered heavy casualties, and the American lines remained virtually intact.

The capture of 183 American prisoners and 25 machine guns by the Germans is claimed in the official report from German headquarters. The German storm troops, it is also reported, advanced to a depth of two metres (about a mile and a quarter) into the American lines at Icheprey. The Americans, the statement adds, sustained heavy losses.

German Officers Lead Men.

With the British Army in France, April 23.—German officers are leading their troops in the assaults, taking the places of non-commissioned officers, who heretofore have been almost invariably for front line work. Their detention in the rear during previous fighting has been part of the German scheme for the preservation of the lives of the men who are responsible for the planning campaigns. Now that the crucial tide of the war is being fought they are out in front to get the best results possible with their men.

Warships Clash.

LONDON, April 23.—British and German light forces clashed on Saturday in the waters east of the great man fortress of Heligoland, the British Admiralty announced today. Few shots were exchanged at any range. One enemy destroyer was observed to be hit. All our ships sailed without casualties.

Steps to Stop Arming of Irish.

LONDON, April 23.—The military authorities have taken over control of the principal Irish railways, the post offices and telephone exchanges, according to the correspondent at Cork of the Daily Chronicle. It is added that the police on Saturday removed all arms and ammunition from gunsmith shops in Dublin, where it is reported that similar action will be taken throughout Ireland.

Famous Aviator Killed.

LONDON, April 23.—Baron Richthofen, the famous German aviator, was shot down and killed back of the British lines along the Somme front.

The German "flying circus" leader will be buried with military honors near the spot where he crashed, and an impressive ceremony is being planned by the British officials.

Norwegian Ships for the Allies.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Announcement was made yesterday that the Shipping Board had chartered 400,000 tons of Norwegian sailing ships which have been engaged in various trades, and they will now be employed only for purposes absolutely essential to the war.

the greatest advance made by him in this Picardy drive was a little more than 35 miles.

Balked in his march on Paris, the German commander started for the Channel ports, via Hazebrouck, on April 9. He is blockaded four miles east of Hazebrouck, and more than 25 miles from Dunkirk, the nearest port. His farthest advance in the Flanders thrust has been about 12 miles.

Apparently, the allies have thrown in only enough of their reserves to hold the Germans, conserving their strength as far as possible. It has been noted, however, that when the necessity of holding became imperative, to avert disaster, the holding power was there to top the enemy onrush.

TO FIGHT CONSCRIPTION.

Irish Members Will Not Attend British House of Commons.

DUBLIN, April 23.—The Irish party members of the House of Commons have decided to remain in Ireland during the crisis. Their object in this is to help their constituents fight conscription.

Fifty-five members of the Irish party met here Saturday and, with John Dillon presiding, unanimously passed a resolution "that in the present crisis we are of the opinion that the highest and most immediate duty of the members of this party is to remain in Ireland and actively co-operate with their constituents in opposing the enforcement of the compulsory military service on a nation without its assent constitutes one of the most brutal acts of tyranny and oppression of which any Government can be guilty. The present proposal of the Lloyd George Government to enforce conscription in Ireland is an outrage and a gross violation of the national rights of Ireland."

Want Bilingual Trainmen Now.

OTTAWA, April 23.—The language question again came up in the Senate when consideration of the railway bill was resumed in committee. Senator Dandurand spoke for his amendment, which proposed to give the Railway Board authority to order that certain of the trainmen on local trains in the province of Quebec might be required to be familiar with both English and French. The amendment was declared lost by 35 to 10.

Half Liberty Loan Subscribed.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Half of the three billion dollars minimum sought for the third Liberty Loan remains to be subscribed in the remaining working days of the campaign. Lichnowsky a Prisoner.

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 23.—Prince Lichnowsky, the German Ambassador at London up to the outbreak of the war, and the publication of whose secret memorandum, which strongly criticized the German foreign policy, is to bring him soon before the German courts, is virtually a prisoner at his chateau in Silesia. He is now under police surveillance because, according to the Dusseldorfer Tageblatt, a plan by which the prince intended to escape to Switzerland before coming to trial has been discovered.

Those English Editors.

It is a favorite allegation of the people in this country that the English are ignorant about Canada. A rather amusing example of how little even an editor may know about Canada is given by Mrs. Florence A. Vickers, a Toronto poetess. Mrs. Vickers wrote a poem for the Westminster Gazette, to which she gave the title "Gold Stripes," with the sub-title "A Cockney Mother Speaks." The poem, of course, was in dialect, but the English editor changed the sub-title to "A Canadian Mother Speaks," and the words "all Poplar" to Alberta, and published that way. Here is the poem, which would indeed be an unheard-of variety of Canadian dialect:

My Bert 'as just come 'ome agin, 'e walks a little lame;
But, thank the Lord, 'e's got 'is eyes, 'is face is just the same.
I'm that glad the shrapnel missed it I could not look at 'im all day.
Though I'd love 'im just as dearly if the 'alf was shot away.
'E's not so regular 'andsome and 'e's not so ugly, too.
But just an average looker, the same as me and you;
And there's not a prouder woman in all Poplar, I believe,
When I go out walkin' with 'im with the gold stripes on 'is sleeve.

There's one 'e says 'e got by bein' just a bloomin' fool;
Fair mad 'e was that day the Boches bombed an infant school.
There was cover for the takin', but 'e couldn't stop to take it.
Through blood and tears 'e saw their line, and knew 'e 'ad to break it.
The other times 'e says 'twas just 'is duty that 'e done.
And once I know the officers they thanked 'im one by one.
And every day I thank the Lord for what we do receive,
When I walk with Bert in khaki, with the gold stripes on 'is sleeve.

the character and aspirations of the Canadian people when engaged in the costly European war. They are indeed building better than they had dared to hope at the time of the disaster. Architecture, according to John Ruskin, "is the art which so disposes and adorns the edifices raised by man, for whatsoever uses, that the sight of them may contribute to the mental health, power and pleasure." In no other style of architecture could a better opportunity be afforded to Canada to rewrite her history in stone, and to rewrite it more fully, than in the pure Gothic of the Canadian Parliament House. The essence of Gothic is that "wearing aspiration which strives to reach infinity."

Something of this thought is animating the men who are intrusted with the building and the adorning sculptures. The early years of the nation's life are to be recorded in wood and stone. In time, too, the tourists who have been wont to look upon the sturdy walls above the Chaudiere and Rideau falls, will see a surpassing chronicle of Canada in peace and war.

Above all else, the precious opportunity has come to Canada, as it has come to no other country, to inscribe in stone the present epoch of her existence, now that she has prepared the foundations for her future nationhood. Herein surely lies her best medium of expressing the power and pleasure of which Ruskin speaks. Herein, too, is where the building will have the truest significance as one recalls the comparison with Rheim's cathedral. Both buildings have been reduced to ruin during the war. The one is to be left a monument and witness to all time to the destructive course which reduced it to a mere shadow of the history which it enshrined. The other, springing from its ashes, should, if Canada so wills it, be the world's great monument to the constructive civilization which reared itself upon the temporary ruin of social order.

V.C. General Wounded Nine Times.

It is officially announced that Brig.-Gen. Adrian Carton de Wiart, V.C., D.S.O., whose name appeared in the casualty list only a fortnight ago, has again been wounded—for the ninth time since the war began. Shortly before the outbreak of war he lost the sight of an eye while serving with the Camel Corps in Somaliland. He lost his left hand in the early fighting at Ypres, and was again wounded in July, 1916, when he gained the V.C. for rallying three battalions which had lost their commanding officers. He went back to the front two months later with five gold stripes on his sleeve, and since then his name has appeared in the casualty list on four occasions. He served in the South African war as a trooper of the Middlesex Yeomanry, was wounded three times, and gain his commission in the Dragoon Guards. Gen. Carton de Wiart is only thirty-four years of age.

On Mission to U. S.

Lieut. Jack Austin, of Toronto, has gone to Washington to give the United States War Department the benefit of his experience as gas defence officer with the 1st Brigade. He is one of a number detailed to afford the American authorities information regarding different phases of the operations on the western front. Lieut. Austin enlisted as a private in the 3rd (Toronto) Battalion after war was declared, and went overseas with the first Canadian contingent. He has been continuously at the front since the 3rd Battalion arrived on the Continent, and received his commission while on active service.

noon it is a bore, no doubt, to be prodded quicker than you want to go up the tempting green alley that leads from the pens and to be kept moving round the fenced arena while your fate is in the air. But the pig's eyes are on the ground. By degrees the same indifference communicates itself to the uninitiated beholder. The likeness between the "own sisters" who follow each other beneath the hammer is so remarkable. There is a thrill of interest, on the arrival of the "own brothers to the above," to see how family likeness and sex difference will reveal themselves. The boars show a greater truculence about their "nicely turned-up noses," while their foamy jaws suggest the ferocity of the male.

Wessex is, indeed, transmuted. Behind me, as I came back to the auction, were the Germans; and in the dairy, about the fields, among the pigs were women landworkers and farming probationers, who are much to the fore here. The sale was nearly over. The "middie whites" had been followed by the "large blacks," and these by heifers and two black and white Dutch bulls—but not, I was relieved to find, by the black giant who had freely yielded his tremendous forehead and broad muzzle to my stroking. The pigs were entering vehicles to be conveyed to their destinations. It was time for tea—the leisurely farmhouse tea that washes out afternoon heats and is perfected with a lounge over pools of the tiny river, while the sun slopes downwards and warns you at last to get into the saddle. As I passed the opening of a lane, a group of prisoners came hurrying to catch the lorry, and one or two had thrown overcoats about their shoulders, for the September chill, promising a morrow as fine or finer, was in the air.—London Times.

A Few Figures.

Col. John S. Dennis, of the British-Canadian recruiting mission, in a speech at the University Club, Chicago, declared that when the United States has entered the war as fully as Canada, we shall have had a casualty list of 2,000,000 and will have enlisted 10,000,000 men. In the three and one-half years Canada has been in the war, he said, her casualties total 115,000, although her population is only 8,000,000.

hobby has been Percheron horses, and he has now the largest individual establishment of these animals in the world. It is not necessary to enumerate the various possessions which go to make up his great heritage. He has grain farms as well as cattle ranches, and grows thousands of bushels of wheat and oats every season. He is the ruler of an estate which would form a kingdom in the eyes of the old world of feudal lords.

And just thirty-four years ago this man was a cowboy, herding cattle on the hills of southern Alberta for other people. At sixteen years of age, young Lane trekked across the plains from his home in Kansas to Montana, in the trail of a ranching outfit. Before railways had cut across the west, and fences were built to mark the boundary lines of new farms, he had ridden across the border into Canada to work on the fresh, sweet grass ranges of Alberta. As success is rated, he has been phenomenally successful. Alone, and by dint of sheer ability, this producer of meats and cereals climbed the ladder of achievement. Unsupported by any organization, he dealt with railways, banks and factories, all of whom have their systems of protection and aggression in the competitive field of business. His experience during the past thirty-four years is eloquent of the possibilities of Canada as a place where men of keen brains and energy may succeed.

If one were to ask George Lane to-day his prescription for success, he would say undoubtedly, "Vigilance and hard work." At sixty Mr. Lane works as industriously and carefully as ever he did. But he is now largely a supervisor of the work which experts do for him on his farms and ranches. He is a close student of the world's markets, and the wide extent of his trading has made him regard the whole world as his friend. To him, free trade is the precious elixir of life. In the large eastern financial centres of Canada and the United States, which he always visits at the outset of each year, this man of the land is well known and well received. Parliamentary honors have been offered to him in the west, but he has avoided them. In his own Alberta country no man is more honored or respected, and it is his particular boast that he has never been engaged in a law suit.

As a successful Canadian, George Lane pays due homage to the country which has given him all he owns. Alberta has made him, and in return that portion of Canada receives the benefit of his devoted patriotism, which is not the brand known as "the last refuge of scoundrels."—The Globe.

He Was Unlucky.

Private Jones was doing his first guard duty. An officer approached and Jones failed to salute. The officer halted and said pompously. "My man, do you know who I am?" Jones admitted his ignorance. "I'm a colonel," the officer said. Jones grinned and said, "Gee, you were lucky. They made me just a private."

Organized Great Team.

The man who was influential in organizing one of the greatest lacrosse teams that ever showed the public the fine points of our national game has just passed away. James Gow, who died in Toronto, went out to the Pacific Coast some years ago, and while living there he helped put the New Westminster team on its feet. His energy and interest in Canada's great game kept the team alive during the trying years of the '80's when the organization was still young. He lived to see the team produce men like Spring and Turnbull, who were famous as lacrosse players from coast to coast.

Witty War Newspapers
From Trench and Ship
Keep the Men Cheerful

SINCE the beginning of the there have appeared in field of British journalism despite the discouragement of the censorship, several interesting and audacious newcomers. They are the sheets published by soldiers in the trenches and sailors at sea. A unique instance is the "Maid's Magazine," with which is connected the "Pandora Piffle," and "Alecto Argus," whose editor contributors are all officers of the Submarine Flotilla. It contains little news and a great deal of joy and nonsense.

An Open Letter— To the Mayor and Councillors of Napanee :

Have your citizens organized to increase food production?

If they have not yet done so, We, the Organization of Resources Committee, earnestly ask you to call them together in a Mass Meeting, and lay before them the necessity of immediate and vigorous efforts—the food situation is critical.

It may astonish you to learn that in 1917 Ontario did not grow enough wheat for its own needs. Consequently every Ontario farmer whose land is suitable, has been urged to sow 5 acres more spring wheat this year so that Ontario's demand for wheat shall not be met at the expense of that portion of the Western crop that should more rightfully be shipped overseas.

For this same reason every householder who has a garden or a piece of vacant land is being urged to grow vegetables, because the more vegetables that are grown and eaten in Ontario the less wheat and meat there will be consumed, and, that being so, the Ontario wheat crop should then be sufficient to feed our own people, and leave more Western wheat and other foods available for export.

By intelligent effort, in the cultivation of his own back garden, or from the cultivation of a nearby piece of land, the average citizen can grow, this summer, enough vegetables to support his family through the next winter. And remember, if food restrictions are enforced next winter, a supply of vegetables in the cellar will be very desirable.

If you already have an unofficial or semi-official organization to stimulate food production, so much the better. That will give you the basis for a comprehensive committee.

A plan that has been adopted in many places is here outlined. You should adapt it to the needs of your own community.

1. A General Committee should be formed, representing every important interest of the community.
2. The work should be done by sub-committees. The following list is sufficiently comprehensive for the largest places. You should adapt it to your own community.
 - (a) A sub-committee on Finance. The Organization of Resources Committee is willing to help local branches financially with publicity, public meetings and organization.
 - (b) A Publicity Committee to place local problems properly before the people, supplementing the larger work of the province-wide publicity, by securing pledges, sending out circular letters, arranging for addresses in churches, schools, motion-picture houses, etc., and by supplying local papers with news items.
 - (c) A sub-committee on Vacant Lot and Back-Yard Gardening to include as placed on farms locally through the Agricultural Representatives or the Government Employment Bureaux.
 - (e) A Farm Lands sub-committee, composed of groups of men to cultivate larger tracts of vacant land in the vicinity of cities, towns and villages. Flax growing is profitable and suitable—flax seed and fibre are much needed.
 - (f) A sub-committee on Schools, to enlist all school-children of sufficient age to work either in home gardens, community gardens, school gardens, or on farms.
 - (g) A sub-committee of women on Conservation to deal with the problems of food-saving in the homes; the more broadly representative it is of women's activities the better. Existing women's organizations should not be interfered with, but since conservation is one of the greatest problems, there should be a women's

HOW TO AVOID BACKACHE AND NERVOUSNESS

Told by Mrs. Lynch From Own Experience.

Providence, R. I.—"I was all run down in health, was nervous, had headaches, my back ached all the time. I was tired and had no ambition for anything. I had taken a number of medicines which did me no good. One day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for women, so I tried it. My nervousness and backache and headaches disappeared. I gained in weight and feel fine, so I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is suffering as I was."—Mrs. ADELINE B. LYNCH, 100 Plain St., Providence, R. I.

Backache and nervousness are symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment. Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but profit by Mrs. Lynch's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

THE PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS.

May Stand as Symbol of Spirit of the Nation.

The new Capitol which is rising from the ruins on Parliament Hill, Ottawa, is slowly approaching completion. It is characteristic of this heroic age that no sooner were the flames extinguished on the site of the buildings which had stood since 1853, than draft sketches were prepared for a nobler, franker structure. The enthusiasm which had animated the builders must have been inspired, to a large extent, by the words of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who said: "When we gaze upon the ruins on the hill, while we still trust that it may be the result of accident, we are reminded of the ruins of Louvain and Rheims. If there is anything which the present calamity should impress upon us it is the duty of resolutely going on with our work." The significance of that work, its magnitude for a people who are giving of their all, even to the last penny and the last man, for the cause of democracy by the borders of No Man's Land, can be gathered from the fact that the new building is costing twice as much as the old one.

This sturdiness of resolution, in view of enormous war expenditures, may rightly be regarded, as a contemporary points out, as a record of the character and aspirations of the Canadian people when engaged in the costly European war. They are indeed building better than they had dared to hope at the time of the disaster. Architecture, according to John Ruskin, "is the art which so disposes and adorns the edifices raised by man, for whatsoever uses, that the sight of them may contribute to the mental health, power and pleasure." In no other style of architecture could a better opportunity be afforded to Canada to rewrite her his-

Pigs of Wessex Sight to See

STRAIGHT over the heathy Wessex ridge the road dropped and became a wooded lane, then turning swerved into a thatched hamlet, whose name it is useless to repeat because even those versed in the rich nomenclature of English villages would hardly believe in it. In the tiny street, one's bicycle picked its way through a scurry of gigs, waggonettes, and small motors. Some hidden attraction drew all footsteps to the roomiest building in the place.

There in the big barn, high-pitched and shapely, at a long table that lost itself in dimness, sat the farmers, 40 feeding like one. The great door on the road was open, and the brilliant noonday sunshine threw a clear square on the floor within it, just reaching to the nearest corner of the table. The sashes of a window set above the door were patterned on this glowing space of light. Further in, the only illumination was from windows in the deep embrasures to right and left, the crossings of transepts of the barn. There jugs were filled, joints carved, and the tables secretly replenished. It was a fine scene out of the Wessex novels. The difficulty with which you grope among modernized settings for the old landmarks, old habits, and old sayings evaporated like a mist. The past itself reached out and placed this bit of reality before you. One just whispered, "Far From the Madding Crowd," and looked on. The clatter of knives and clink of the glasses testified to the embodied Present; but when you peered into the dim farther end you were not so sure, for the cask there and the farmers lunching near it had taken on the augustness of the old shades.

One word, like a magnet, had drawn most of these atoms together and set up the scene. The word was Pigs. Pigs might seem to have found their paradise already—if it is really true that the pig is the cleanest of all animals—in the new white pigeries, freshly concreted, which ran at an angle to the barn. One large pinky-white animal from Yorkshire panted in the sun there, in majestic isolation from the fair, cocking a cynical eye at the golden thatch on the barn roof opposite. We left him to pant, and sought coolness in the long dairy, where rows of Dutch cows, ranged in their stalls ready for milking, showed their rich markings of black and white, fresh as a clean pack of cards. There out into the sun again, for the barn is empty, luncheon is over, and humanity has assembled itself round the hurdled circle dominated by the auctioneer.

Of all the saleable animals pigs seem the most magnificently free from self-consciousness. It is less than nothing to them that attentive onlookers encircle them, appraise them, and bandy their guineas above the corkscrew tails. On this hot afternoon it is a bore, no doubt, to be prodded quicker than you want to go up the tempting green alley that leads from the pens and to be kept moving round the fenced arena while your fate is in the air. But the pig's eyes are on the ground. By degrees the same indifference communicates itself to the uninitiated beholder. The likeness between the "own sisters" who follow each other beneath the hammer is so remarkable. There is a thrill of interest, on the arrival

George Lane of Alberta

JUST as people may say truthfully that some men have woven the fabric of their country's history, and that the story of their lives is the truest record of a nation's growth, so it is equally true that other great men, known sometimes as builders, are the products rather than the moulders of their land, and to understand them is to feel the spirit of the forest, or the field, or the sea. Canada, which is still a country of pioneers, owns largely the latter class. Of the greater part of this vast Dominion may it still be said:

"Wild and wide are my burdens,
stern as death is my sway;
And I wait for the men who will win me—and I will not be won in a day."

It is not inappropriate, therefore, that Canadians should be introduced to a man who is a pioneer in the distant foothills of Alberta, and one to whom that expansive region of the country has spoken "as a mother speaks," and given lavishly of its treasure. He is a great, tall, lanky man, who, even at sixty years of age, appears more at home in the saddle than on foot. He usually wears an old, battered Stetson hat, which completely hides a remarkable brow and a shrewd, twinkling pair of blue eyes. Expressive lines mark a face of strength and character, born of the solitude and power of that massive, scenic country which lies along the eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains. This is Mr. George Lane, the millionaire rancher and farmer of Alberta.

Pauline Johnson, the Indian poetess, has described the far western rangeland in colorful words:

"Foothills to the Rockies lifting,
Brown and blue and green;
Warm Alberta sunlight drifting Over leagues between."

I always think of that verse when the picture of George Lane comes into my mind. He suggests in some indescribable way the breezy prairie and the wide rolling hills of his own Bar U ranch, which lies some twenty-five miles west of the little town of High River, almost within the shadow of the first range of the mountains. There are over forty thousand acres within the bounds of the Bar U ranch, and coursing through the very centre of it, fresh from the ice and snow of the Rockies, is the Pekisko River. Thousands of cattle and hundreds of horses, sheep and swine feed upon the rich pasturage and crops of the Bar U every year. Beautiful pure-bred Percheron horses, whose sires were brought from the famous La Perche Valley in France, are the pride of the ranch. Mr. Lane's hobby has been Percheron horses, and he has now the largest individual establishment of these animals in the world. It is not necessary to enumerate the various possessions which go to make up his great heritage. He has grain farms as well as cattle ranches, and grows thousands of bushels of wheat and oats every season. He is the ruler of an estate which would form a kingdom in the eyes of the old world of feudal lords. And just thirty-four years ago this the Canadian people when engaged in the costly European war. They are indeed building better than they had dared to hope at the time of the disaster. Architecture, according to John Ruskin, "is the art which so disposes and adorns the edifices raised by man, for whatsoever uses, that the sight of them may contribute to the mental health, power and pleasure." In no other style of architecture could a better opportunity be afforded to Canada to rewrite her history in stone, and to rewrite it more fully, than in the pure Gothic of the Canadian Parliament House. The essence of Gothic is that soaring aspiration which strives to reach infinity.

Something of this thought is animating the men who are intrusted with the building and the adorning sculptures. The early years of the nation's life are to be recorded in wood and stone. In time, too, the tourists who have been wont to look upon the sturdy walls above the Chaudiere and Rideau falls, will see a surpassing chronicle of Canada in peace and war.

Above all else, the precious opportunity has come to Canada, as it has come to no other country, to inscribe in stone the present epoch of her existence, now that she has prepared the foundations for her future nationhood. Herein surely lies her best medium of expressing the power and pleasure of which Ruskin speaks. Herein, too, is where the building will have the true significance as one recalls the comparison with Rheim' cathedral. Both buildings have been reduced to ruin during the war. The one is to be left a monument and witness to all time to the destructive course which reduced it to a mere shadow of the history which it enshrined. The other, springing from its ashes, should, if Canada so wills it, be the world's great monument to the constructive civilization which reared itself upon the temporary ruin of social order.

V.C. General Wounded Nine Times.

It is officially announced that Brig.-Gen. Adrian Carton de Wiart, V.C., D.S.O., whose name appeared in the casualty list only a fortnight ago, has again been wounded—for the ninth time since the war began. Shortly before the outbreak of war he lost the sight of an eye while serving with the Camel Corps in Somaliland. He lost his left hand in the early fighting at Ypres, and was again wounded in July, 1916, when he gained the V.C. for rallying three battalions which had lost their commanding officers. He went back to the front two months later with five gold stripes on his sleeve, and since then his name has appeared in the casualty list on four occasions. He served in the South African war as a trooper of the Middlesex Yeomanry, was wounded three times, and gain his commission in the Dragoon Guards. Gen. Carton de Wiart is only thirty-four years of age.

On Mission to U. S.

Lieut. Jack Austin, of Toronto, has gone to Washington to give the United States War Department the benefit of his experience as gas defence officer with the 1st Brigade. He is one of a number detailed to afford the American authorities information regarding different phases of the operations on the western front. Lieut. Austin enlisted as a private in the 3rd (Toronto) Battalion after war was declared, and went overseas with the first Canadian contingent. He has been continuously at the front since the 3rd Battalion arrived on the Continent, and received his commission while on active service.

noon it is a bore, no doubt, to be prodded quicker than you want to go up the tempting green alley that leads from the pens and to be kept moving round the fenced arena while your fate is in the air. But the pig's eyes are on the ground. By degrees the same indifference communicates itself to the uninitiated beholder. The likeness between the "own sisters" who follow each other beneath the hammer is so remarkable. There is a thrill of interest, on the arrival of the "own brothers to the above," to see how family likeness and sex difference will reveal themselves. The boars show a greater truculence about their "nicely turned-up noses," while their foamy jaws suggest the ferocity of the male.

Vessex is, indeed, transmuted. Behind me, as I came back to the auction, were the Germans; and in the dairy, about the fields, among the pigs were women landworkers and farming probationers, who are much to the fore here. The sale was nearly over. The "middle whites" had been followed by the "large blacks," and these by heifers and two black and white Dutch bulls—but not, I was relieved to find, by the black giant who had freely yielded his tremendous forehead and broad muzzle to my stroking. The pigs were entering vehicles to be conveyed to their destinations. It was time for tea. The leisurely farmhouse tea that washes out afternoon heats and is perfected with a lounge over pools of the tiny river, while the sun slopes downwards and warns you at last to get into the saddle. As I passed the opening of a lane, a group of prisoners came hurrying to catch the lorry, and one or two had thrown overcoats about their shoulders, for the September chill, promising a morrow as fine or finer, was in the air.—London Times.

A Few Figures.

Col. John S. Dennis, of the British-Canadian recruiting mission, in a speech at the University Club, Chicago, declared that when the United States has entered the war as fully as Canada, we shall have had a casualty list of 2,000,000 and will have enlisted 10,000,000 men. In the three and one-half years Canada has been in the war, he said, her casualties total 115,000, although her population is only 8,000,000.

hobby has been Percheron horses, and he has now the largest individual establishment of these animals in the world. It is not necessary to enumerate the various possessions which go to make up his great heritage. He has grain farms as well as cattle ranches, and grows thousands of bushels of wheat and oats every season. He is the ruler of an estate which would form a kingdom in the eyes of the old world of feudal lords.

And just thirty-four years ago this man was a cowboy, herding cattle on the hills of southern Alberta for other people. At sixteen years of age, young Lane trekked across the plains from his home in Kansas to Montana, in the trail of a ranching outfit. Before railways had cut across the west, and fences were built to mark the boundary lines of new farms, he had ridden across the border into Canada to work on the fresh, sweet grass ranges of Alberta. As success is rated, he has been phenomenally successful. Alone, and by dint of sheer ability, this producer of meats and cereals climbed the ladder of achievement. Unsupported by any organization, he dealt with railways, banks and factories, all of whom have their systems of protection and aggression in the competitive field of business. His experience during the past thirty-four years is eloquent of the possibilities of Canada as a place where men of keen brains and energy may succeed.

If one were to ask George Lane to-day his prescription for success, he would say undoubtedly, "Vigilance and hard work." At sixty Mr. Lane works as industriously and carefully as ever he did. But he is now largely a supervisor of the work which experts do for him on his farms and ranches. He is a close student of the world's markets, and the wide extent of his trading has made him regard the whole world as his friend. To him, free trade is the precious elixir of life. In the large eastern financial centres of Canada and the United States, which he always visits at the outset of each year, this man of the land is well known and well received. Parliamentary honors have been offered to him in the west, but he has avoided them. In his own Alberta country no man is more honored or respected, and it is his particular boast that he has never been engaged in a law suit.

As a successful Canadian, George Lane pays due homage to the country which has given him all he owns. Alberta has made him, and in return that portion of Canada receives the benefit of his devoted patriotism, which is not the brand known as "the last refuge of scoundrels."—The Globe.

He Was Unlucky.

Private Jones was doing his first guard duty. An officer approached and Jones failed to salute. The officer halted and said pompously. "My man, do you know who I am?" Jones admitted his ignorance. "I'm a colonel," the officer said. Jones grinned and said, "Gee, you were lucky. They made me just a private."

Organized Great Team.

The man who was influential in organizing one of the greatest lacrosse teams that ever showed the public the fine points of our national game has just passed away. James Gow, who died in Toronto, went out to the Pacific Coast some years ago, and while living there he helped put the New Westminster team on its feet. His energy and interest in Canada's great game kept the team alive during the trying years of the '80's when the organization was still young. He lived to see the team produce men like Spring and Turnbull, who were famous as lacrosse players from coast to coast.

TO THE INDIVIDUAL CITIZEN

If you have not yet decided to plant a vegetable garden make up your mind to do so now. You will not regret it. There is still lots of time. Potatoes and beans may be planted up to June 1st and these are the best substitutes for wheat and meat.

For good, practical advice upon how to lay out and cultivate a Vegetable Garden, write for a free copy of the booklet entitled: "A Vegetable Garden for Every Home." This has been prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture for the guidance of citizens who will respond to this call for increased production.

Witty War Newspapers

From Trench and Ship

Keep the Men Cheerful

SINCE the beginning of the war there have appeared in the field of British journalism, despite the discouragement of the censorship, several interesting and audacious newcomers. These are the sheets published by soldiers in the trenches and sailors at sea. A case in point is the "Maidstone Gazette," with which is incorporated the "Pandora Piffle," and the "Argus," whose editor and contributors are all officers of the 8th Marine Flotilla. It contains a lot of news and a great deal of jollity and nonsense.

The undersea journalists are called by those who ride the bil-lows instead of diving under them. Several papers have appeared on different ships of the battle fleet. In one, the "North Sea Times," a contributor, "Mr. Clinker Cole from the Stokehold," protesting against the uneven distribution of fighting chances, perpetrates a pun that is so bad that it is positively preeminent.

"Well, I dunno, but some blokes seem to scoop in all the luck wot's goin'," he complains resentfully. "Every time there's anything doing, that 'ere menageries squadding—you know, the 'Lion' and 'Tiger' and 'Indomita (bull),' whatever kind of animal that may be—always gets a look in and does something, where as the remainder of us merely takes the part of audience."

Even the "Voice of the Benzine Lancers"—motor transport—makes itself heard through a special organ; and more than one enterprising little British sheet, published just behind the trenches "somewhere in France," contains, along with its news and nonsense, advertisements of concerts, private theatricals, wrestling and boxing matches, and football games organized among the men. In all the papers anecdotes of the lighter side of military life abound. Here are a few of them:

"The skipper of a trawler arrived alongside in his dingy last week, having a German mine in tow," reports a naval correspondent. "The worthy man's reply to urgent requests not to bring the thing too close was, 'It's all right, sir. I've knocked off the 'orns with a boat hook.'"

Two brief dialogues were sent in to compete for the leather medal offered by a journal published in the trenches in Flanders:

Orderly officer (severely)—Didn't you enlist to fight for your country? Discontented Soldier—Yes, but I didn't enlist to eat it.

The second dialogue takes place between an infantryman and a motor mechanic:

Infantryman—Which is your sergeant-major—that man over there? Friend (of the motor transport)—No, the other one; him with the pneumatic stummock.

Came From Newfoundland.

The Daily Mail says it is feared that the Antarctic relief ship Aurora, which took part in the Shackleton expedition, has been lost with all hands while returning to England. It is understood the vessel sailed from Wellington, N.Z., in June with a crew of about 22, and nothing has been heard from it since. Vessels sent out to search for it found only a life-buoy marked Aurora and some wreckage. Lloyd's recently posted the Aurora as being considerably overdue.

The Aurora, formerly a Newfoundland sealing steamer, carried the Mawson Antarctic expedition to Adelle Land in 1913 and rescued the expedition later in the same year. While going to the assistance of the Shackleton expedition early in 1916 the Aurora was damaged and returned to New Zealand, after leaving some of its crew at Ross Barrier. Sir Ernest Shackleton set out to rescue the members of the Aurora's crew in December, 1916. He found seven of them alive, but three others had perished.

TREATMENT OF FRUIT TREES WHICH HAVE BEEN INJURED BY MICE OR RABBITS.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

As mice or rabbits have, doubtless injured many trees in Canada during the past winter, the following information is given in regard to the treatment of the trees in order to save them. If a tree is badly girdled by mice or rabbits it usually dies left untreated. If, as soon as the wound is noticed, it is cleaned and covered with grafting wax or son-paste, such as sulphur, cowdung or clay, and wrapped with cloth to exclude air and prevent the wood from drying out, there is a possibility of saving the tree if the girdle is small one, as the sap which rises through the wood will continue to do so, and returning through the inner bark in an elaborated condition will cause growth to be made all around the upper part of the wound, and the latter be not too large there is chance of its healing over. If, however, the wood becomes dry before the bandage is put on, the tree will almost certainly die, although it may continue to grow throughout the season. When the wax and bandage are applied the tree should be headed back considerably to lessen the amount of transpiration of moisture, as there will not be as much sap rise as if the tree were uninjured and the wood will thus dry out sooner than if it were headed back. If the girdle is near the ground, in addition to covering the injured part with wax or cowdung and clay, it is advisable to mound up the soil about the tree to cover the wound and thus help to prevent the wood from drying out. The mound should be up-about six inches above the wound and be about two feet cross at the base.

Girdled trees are frequently saved and more surely saved than by the above method, by connecting the upper and lower edges of the girdle with scions, which are inserted about an inch apart all around the trunk.
This is known as bridge grafting.
The more scions that are used the more quickly they will grow together and form a new trunk, but two or three scions successfully grafted on a small tree will carry enough sap to keep the tree alive. A slanting cut is made at each end of the wound in the uninjured wood in which the ends of the scions are to be inserted. Strong, plump scions of the previous season's growth—not necessarily from the same tree, nor even the same variety cut a little longer than the distance be-

Cheer Up and Thank God for the Y.M.C.A.

TRY to picture yourself in the muddy cold trenches after exciting days and long nights of mortal danger and intense nervous strain. Rushing "whiz-bangs" and screaming "coal boxes" are no respecters of persons. You are hit! But despite shock and pain you still can face the long weary trudge back to dressing station. Weary, overwrought and depressed, you are prey to wild imaginings of that other coming ordeal with the surgeon. There are other "walking wounded," too! You must wait, wait, wait. And then—

Up comes a cheery Y.M.C.A. man, the ever-present "big brother" to the soldier, with words of manly encouragement. Close beside the dressing station the good generous folks at home have enabled him to set up a canteen. He hands you biscuits, and chocolate or coffee.

"In thousands of cases," writes an officer, "it was that first hot cup of coffee that dragged the man back to life and sanity."

The tremendous helpfulness of the Y.M.C.A. as an aid to the "morale," or fighting spirit, of the soldiers is everywhere praised. No wonder the Germans make every effort to smash the Y.M.C.A. huts out of existence.

The Y.M.C.A. is everywhere. You first met the helpful, manly Y.M.C.A. worker in camp, then on train and boat, at camp in England and in France, close to the firing line. Often he risks his life to reach you in the trenches. He has won the warmest praise from military authorities, statesmen—the King!

Have you a precious boy at the front? You cannot be "over there" to guide him away from fierce temptations of camp and city. You cannot comfort him in his supreme hour of trial. Your parcels to him are necessarily few. But the Y.M.C.A., thank God, is "over there," going where you cannot go—doing the very things you long to do—doing it for you and for him.

Will you help? This vast organization of helpfulness needs at least $2,250,000 from Canada for 1918. For your boy's sake be GENEROUS!!

The harbor is rock-girt, and only small boats can enter it, large vessels finding anchorage outside water 13 and 15 fathoms deep.

In addition to the story of Jonah and the whale, with Jaffa is associated the Perseus and Andromeda legend. A tradition dating from 16 declares that the Latin Hospice in the town is built on the site of the Hot of Simon the Tanner, an honor claimed for a mosque near the lighthouse.

the method, by connecting the upper and lower edges of the girdle scions, which are inserted about an inch apart all around the trunk. It is known as bridge grafting. More scions that are used the more quickly they will grow together to form a new trunk, but two or three scions successfully grafted on a small tree will carry enough sap to the tree alive. A slanting cut made at each end of the wound in uninjured wood in which the ends of the scions are to be inserted. Strong, up scions of the previous season's growth—not necessarily from the same tree nor even the same variety cut a little longer than the distance between the slanting cuts, are made re-shaped at each end. They are a little longer than the distance between the cuts in order that by inserting the ends into the cuts will be necessary to bend them, thus have them under pressure which helps to keep them in position. By inserting, some of the inside of the stock should remain in contact with the inside bark of the tree, as it is here, or at the cambium layer, where union takes place. Soon as the scions are all placed, wound, especially about the ends of the scions where inserted in the tree, is covered with grafting wax. Ends are also at the same time aged with a piece of sackcloth and the trunk to aid in keeping scions in place and to exclude the tree. The tree should then be well watered. The scions, if properly placed and inserted, should soon unite the stock and then carry the sap to the top of the tree. This is one of the most satisfactory methods of utilizing the badly girdled tree to cut it off close to the ground and insert a scion of some good variety. This graft should grow at least three feet in height the first year and make a nice young tree. A young tree may sometimes be killed when girdling is well above the trunk by cutting the tree back so as to remove all of the injured part. In such conditions young trees usually make new growth and the strongest shoot may be selected to form a new trunk and top for the tree. This method is not usually satisfactory in the injury occurs less than two years after the tree has been planted.

THE ALLIES' DEBT TO BELGIUM

What Do You Know About It? Will YOU HELP to PAY IT?

Of course YOU KNOW that the Belgian Army stopped the enemy's rush to Paris in 1914, and thereby made the whole civilized world her debtor.

But DO YOU KNOW that a splendid opportunity of helping to pay that debt is now presented to you by means of the Canadian Bureau in Brussels? The appalling fact that in Belgium there are thousands of little orphans to be cared for, has caused the Belgian Relief Commission in Canada to establish under the administration of Mr. Baetens (a member of the Commission for Relief in Belgium) a Canadian Bureau, from which help to the children will be given in the name of Canada. In this way Canadian donations will maintain their identity.

DO YOU KNOW that many of these orphans are the children of the men who helped to ensure YOUR safety?

DO YOU KNOW that since the United States entered the war, the direction of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, which was formerly in the hands of the Americans, is now carried on, without German interference, by Dutch and Spanish representatives, approved by their own and the British Governments?

The United States' loan to Belgium permits the commission to furnish only a bowl of soup and two pieces of bread per day to each of the five million people requiring assistance. This has been proved insufficient for growing children.

BELGIAN CHILDREN'S HEALTH FUND.—There are thousands of children who have suffered so severely from this lack of nourishment that their health is seriously impaired. Hundreds are sent each month to Holland, France and Switzerland, where they are looked after under the special care of the Belgian Government, to which Canadian donations will be sent direct.

Thousands of these children are on the waiting list. They can be cared for, housed, fed, clothed and given medical attention for six weeks at a cost of not less than $20. They are WAITING for your contribution.

BELGIAN ORPHANS' FUND.—Think why they are orphans. The sum of $3.70 a month will keep one orphan in hands where he will have a chance to live and get an education.

Your CONTRIBUTION will strengthen this resistance. Decide what you can do, and do it NOW.

WONDERFUL STUFF! LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS

By a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

Oh humbug! Any corn, whether hard, or between the toes, will loosen up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone and is a pound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small tin of freezone, which will cost but a few cents, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any corn, aching corn or callus. Instantly soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be pulled off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them with even irritating the surrounding skin. Just think! No pain at all; no sore or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

TREATMENT OF FRUIT TREES WHICH HAVE BEEN INJURED BY MICE OR RABBITS.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

If mice or rabbits have, doubtless, injured many trees in Canada during past winter, the following information is given in regard to the treatment of the trees in order to save them. If a tree is badly girdled by mice or rabbits it usually dies if left untreated. If, as soon as the injury is noticed, it is cleaned and treated with grafting wax or some other substance, such as sulphur, cowdung and clay, and wrapped with cloth to exclude air and prevent the wood from drying out, there is a possibility of saving the tree if the girdle is a small one, as the sap which rises through the wood will continue to do so and returning through the inner part in an elaborated condition will cause growth to be made all around the upper part of the wound, and if the latter be not too large there is a chance of its healing over. If, however, the wound becomes dry before bandage is put on, the tree will not certainly die, although it may continue to grow throughout the season. When the wax and bandage applied to the tree should be headed off considerably to lessen the amount of transpiration of moisture, there will not be as much sap as if the tree were uninjured, the wood will thus dry out soon after if it were headed back. If the girdle is near the ground, in addition to covering the injured part with wax or cowdung and clay, it is advisable to mound up the soil about the tree to cover the wound and thus to prevent the wood from drying out. The mound should be up to six inches above the wound and be about two feet cross at the base.

Girdled trees are frequently saved, and more surely saved than by the old method, by connecting the upper and lower edges of the girdle with scions, which are inserted about an inch apart all around the trunk. This is known as bridge grafting. If more scions that are used the better, quickly they will grow together and form a new trunk, but two or three scions successfully grafted on a small tree will carry enough sap to the tree alive. A slanting cut made at each end of the wound in uninjured wood in which the ends of the scions are to be inserted. Strong

G. W. MILLER HAS GAINED 32 POUNDS BY TAKING TANLAC

Improvement of Former Postmaster Surprises All of His Friends.

Remarkable, indeed, was the statement made by G. W. Miller of 232 McNab street, Hamilton, who recently declared that he has only gotten complete relief from rheumatism and stomach trouble by taking Tanlac, but that he has actually gained thirty-two pounds in weight besides. Mr. Miller was for twelve years Postmaster and merchant at 60 Corners, Brant county, and is well-known and respected throughout Southern Ontario. Mr. Miller's complete statement follows:

"As a result of rheumatism and stomach trouble I had fallen off one hundred and fifteen pounds. I now weigh one hundred and forty-seven pounds, which puts me even beyond my normal weight, and I don't think I have ever felt better in my life. I was so sick and crippled up that I had to sell out my business and get a man to take charge of the Post Office. My legs had perished away until they were no larger than my arms. I couldn't bend them—the leaders seemed to be tied in knots and hurt me so I could hardly bear anything to touch me. I just could manage by the use of a walking stick. My stomach was so upset that I could hardly eat anything. My appetite was all gone and I just seemed to be slowly starving. Sometimes all I could take was a glass of milk and even then I suffered.

"For several months I was under treatment at a considerable cost without getting any relief, but my improvement on a few bottles of Tanlac has astonished me and all who knew of my awful condition. It seems that everybody I see asks me what I have done to gain so much weight and make me look so much better. My appetite is so big now I can hardly eat enough to satisfy me, and I can eat anything—meats and all kinds of vegetables—and nothing hurts me. I was badly constipated, too, but by using the Tanlac tablets in connection with Tanlac I have been relieved of this trouble. The rheumatism is all gone out of my legs—I don't have to use a cane any more—and I can walk any place I want to go. My legs are getting back to their regular size, my muscles are getting firm and I simply feel altogether different in every way. Of course I owe my present good health to nothing but Tanlac and am glad to make a statement that will reach others who may be suffering as I did, for I honestly believe Tanlac will help them."

Tanlac is sold in Napanee at WAL-LACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON.

War Work Summary

There are:

- 96 branches of Canadian Y.M.C.A. in France.
- 79 branches in England.
- Dozens of Y.M.C.A. dug-outs in forward trenches under fire.
- Over 120 Military Secretaries overseas.
- 300,000 letters a day written in Y.M.C.A. overseas buildings.
- $133,000 needed for athletic equipment. (Helps morale of soldiers.)
- Y.M.C.A. saved hundreds of lives at Vimy Ridge by caring for walking wounded.
- Over 100 pianos in England and France, also 300 gramophones and 27 moving picture machines.

Cheer Up and Thank God for the Y.M.C.A.

TRY to picture yourself in the muddy cold trenches after exciting days and long nights of mortal danger and intense nervous strain. Rushing "whiz-bangs" and screaming "coal boxes" are no respecters of persons. You are hit! But despite shock and pain you still can face the long weary trudge back to dressing station. Weary, overwrought and depressed, you are prey to wild imaginings of that other coming ordeal with the surgeon. There are other "walking wounded," too! You must wait, wait, wait. And then—

Up comes a cheery Y.M.C.A. man, the ever-present "big brother" to the soldier, with words of manly encouragement. Close beside the dressing station the good generous folks at home have enabled him to set up a canteen. He hands you biscuits, and chocolate or coffee.

Canada-Wide Appeal

"In thousands of cases," writes an officer, "it was that first hot cup of coffee that dragged the man back to life and sanity."

The tremendous helpfulness of the Y.M.C.A. as an aid to the "morale," or fighting spirit, of the soldiers is everywhere praised. No wonder the Germans make every effort to smash the Y.M.C.A. huts out of existence.

The Y.M.C.A. is everywhere. You first met the helpful, manly Y.M.C.A. worker in camp, then on train and boat, at camp in England and in France, close to the firing line. Often he risks his life to reach you in the trenches. He has won the warmest praise from military authorities, statesmen—the King!

Have you a precious boy at the front? You cannot be "over there" to guide him away from fierce temptations of camp and city. You cannot comfort him in his supreme hour of trial. Your parcels to him are necessarily few. But the Y.M.C.A., thank God, is "over there," going where you cannot go—doing the very things you long to do—doing it for you and for him.

Will you help? This vast organization of helpfulness needs at least $2,250,000 from Canada for 1918. For your boy's sake be GENEROUS!!

Jaffa (or Joppa). "The beautiful and the seaport of Jerusalem" is a town of about 50,000 inhabitants, 10,000 of which are Christians and 10,000 Jews. The town is set on a rocky cliff about 100 feet high, a road by which it is approached has vineyards on the left, and on the right orange gardens covering an area of about three square miles. The district is very fertile, particularly the Plain of Sharon, which extends along the coast to Caesarea, 32 miles north of Jaffa, and is crossed by the Na'el Auja, next to the Jordan the latest river in Palestine. In Jaffa there are a barracks, an Arab bazaar, an English school for girls, an English Protestant cemetery; and a London Jews Society is quartered at the entrance to the German colony, the northeastern outskirts of the town, where also lies the railway station. The harbor is rock-girt, but only small boats can enter it, large vessels finding anchorage outside water 13 and 15 fathoms deep.

In addition to the story of Jonah and the whale, with Jaffa is associated the Perseus and Andromeda legend. A tradition dating from 16 declares that the Latin Hospice in the town is built on the site of the House of Simon the Tanner, an honor claimed for a mosque near the lighthouse.

COLTS ARE PROFITABLE

When Fed and Cared For According to the Best Practice.

TO BUILD FARM WORKSHOP

Full Directions With Plans and Bill of Materials—They Will Appeal to the Farmer Who Does His Own Repairing.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE FIRST WINTER is a critical time in the life of a colt. The care and attention he receives during this period determines, to a great extent, his future usefulness. If he be poorly fed, neglected, and allowed to become thin and weak, it is probable he will never be as good or valuable an animal as he would have been under more favorable circumstances. He, in the first place, should be provided with warm, comfortable and well ventilated quarters; and, while he should be taught to lead, and stand tied, it is much better if he have a roomy stall to stand in.

The next question is: "What, and how much should he be fed?" In our opinion there is little danger of over-feeding at this age. While there are exceptions, it is unusually safe to give a weanling all he will eat, provided he gets regular exercise, but it must be understood that he should not be given more than he will eat. It is a mistake to keep food before him all the time. He should, with apparent relish, eat all that is given him, in at most 1½ hours, and then will be ready for the next meal when the time arrives.

It is not easy to say just how much food a colt of a given age and size should consume, but the attendant, if a careful and observant man, will soon be able to determine the quantity to be given at each meal, and be able to give sufficient without waste. Hay and oats should be the food upon which to depend for growth, both of muscle and bone. If other grain than oats be given we will take back what we have said about "there being little danger of over-feeding." All food should be of first-class quality. Well-saved clover is the best kind of hay, but where this cannot be got, well-saved Timothy makes a good substitute. Hay should be fed in the necessary quantities three times daily, and we prefer whole, to cut hay for such young animals.

The manner in which oats should be fed will admit of argument. In our opinion, and experience, rolled oats that have been scalded and allowed to become cool, and that they thrive on such. The practice of mixing a ration of rolled oats and a little wheat chaff or cut hay, in a pail, pouring some boiling water on it, covering and allowing it to stand a few hours before feeding, gives excellent results.

The morning's meal can be prepared in the evening, and the evening meal in the same vessel in the morning, the noon-day meal being either rolled or whole oats. In addition to hay and oats the colt should be given a carrot or two with the meal, and a feed of bran, either dry or dry, at least twice weekly. It may be extra, or in lieu of oats is indicated by the apparent requirements of the colt.

His feet require attention. Wear is usually not sufficient to keep them in proper shape, the toes are long and the heels deep and narrow and the wall turns inward in the quarters. If this be not corrected or prevented, permanent harm results. The feet should be carefully examined at least once monthly dressed to as near the normal and shape as possible by the use of a shoeing smith's knife and rasp.

The stall should be cleaned out at least once weekly.—J. H. R., Ont. Agricultural College, Guelph.

A Farm Workshop.

The progressive farmer recognizes the need of a small building where he can overhaul, paint and repair farm equipment in the most efficient manner. Such a building should be compact and conveniently arranged with a floor space that will accommodate any of his larger machinery.

The floor should be of concrete, stand the wear and tear. In making the floor it will be necessary to use the anchor bolts, to which the floor is fastened, before the concrete has set.

The work bench, forge and anvil must be so placed that the center of the floor is left clear, but the bench and anvil must be well lighted. The placing of the long window will depend upon which side of the shop receives the best light.

Stairs lead through a trap-door in the loft, where the lumber, etc., is stored. This loft is lighted with a window at each end and it also has a small door at the front, on a level with the floor.

WENT DOWN WITH TRAWLER:

British Sea Dog Awarded V. C. After His Death.

Britain has been thrilled by the stirring story of Skipper Thos. Crisp, R.N.R. (killed in action), who has been awarded the V.C. for the glorious fight of the trawler Nelson with a U-boat. His son and second hand, Thomas William Crisp, receives the D.S.M. for his part in the encounter. The skipper discerned the submarine on the horizon. The gun-layer held his fire until Crisp said: "It is no use waiting any longer; we will have to let them have it."

The submarine sent shell after shell at the smack, and the fourth went through the port bow. There was no confusion on board, not even when the seventh shell struck the skipper, passed through his side, through the deck, and cut through the side of the ship.

His son, the second hand, at once took charge of the tiller, and the firing continued. All the time water was pouring into the ship and she was sinking.

The gunlayer offered the skipper first aid: "It's all right, boy; do your best," said Crisp, who added to the second hand: "Send a message off."

"Nelson being attacked by submarine. Skipper killed. Send assistance at once."

All this time the smack was sinking, and only five rounds of ammunition were left. Crisp, jun., went to his father lying there on the deck, and heard him say, "Abandon ship. Throw the books overboard." He was asked if they should lift him into the boat, but his answer was: "Tom, I'm done; throw me overboard."

He was in too bad a condition to be moved, and they left him on his deck. The crew took to the small boat, and about fifteen minutes afterwards the Nelson went down by the head.

Skipper Crisp was a native of Lowestoft, and "Sammy," who was with him, is the younger of the hero's two sons.

On a previous occasion he performed a smart and heroic piece of work, for which he was given the D.S.C. and a handsome donation.

Crisp was 46 years of age, lost his wife only a fortnight before his last heroic deed. His son is and for years had been his father's companion at sea.

Fooling the Patient.

That blisters can actually be produced on the skin by means of hypnotic suggestion alone is the claim made by Mr. J. Arthur Hadfield, temporary surgeon, R.N., describing some recent experiments in the L. cet.

Getting the consent of a seaman patient at the Royal Naval Hospital, Chatham, to try the experiment, Hadfield hypnotized the man, then suggested to him that his arm was being touched with a red-iron and that a blister would form on the spot. The arm was then covered with a bandage pinned on with a safety-pin, and the pin was sealed with sealing-wax to make certain that the arm could not be interfered with in any way. The patient watched continuously by nurses next morning, when, in the presence of three surgeons, the seal was broken and the bandage removed, showing a small blister on the spot. This gradually developed during the day to form a large blister, an area of inflammation around it.

In two other experiments the arm was actually touched with a red-iron. In the first instance the surgeon suggested that there would be no pain, and in the second that it would be the usual pain of a blister. The first blister was perfectly painless, had practically no area of inflammation around it, and healed very rapidly. The second blister, painful from the first, was surrounded by a reddened area, and took longer to heal.

From the fact that the blister which was rendered painless by hypnotism healed so quickly, Hadfield suggests that hypnosis, rendering wounds and certain painful conditions such as pleurisy, might with advantage be made part of the treatment of such conditions.—Tit-Bits.

GIRLS! LEMON JUICE IS A SKIN WHITENER

How to make a creamy beauty lotion for a few cents.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quart pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, whitener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any drug store and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quart pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands.

Range Horse Steak.

As a partial solution of the meat problem W. F. Butler, a well known man in the Western States, is urging the slaughter of the range horses of the North-West which, he declares, are unprofitable for their present purposes.

Hundreds of thousands who cannot afford to buy beef would by this means be supplied with meat, he declares, and $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 in cash would be the return. Such a course would also help to relieve the hay shortage and provide range for 1,000,000 cattle and several million head of sheep, he believes.

"There is no staple market for the lightweight horse at the present time," he declares in a statement on the subject. "Its day of practical usefulness is practically at an end. It is a hay-destroyer—a live liability rather than a live asset. This does not apply to the general utility draft horse. The farm draft horse is an asset to any country, and will remain an asset just as long as farms are plowed and man grows crops for his sustenance.

"Throughout the North-West I would say that there are over a million such animals. Among certain people there is an inherited prejudice against horse flesh, but there are many people who have not a prejudice against this food. In many countries it has been used for hundreds of years as a food product, and at the present time it is offered for sale in New York, Cincinnati, and St. Louis.

"In food value horse flesh is about equivalent to lean beef. From a sanitary standpoint, the horse is one of the cleanest animals living. Its habits require that it eat the purest food and drink the best of water. It lives in the open and is freer from transmissible diseases than are either cattle or hogs.

"I am of opinion that there will be no difficulty in obtaining a steady supply of horse flesh for some time to come. We received a communication several days ago from one of the large Western horse markets saying that it would contract to supply 3,000 horses monthly for the next twelve months."

Jas. Gordon, the colporteur, has moved into his last winter's stand, in Davis & Coates' tin shop, in the Campbell House building. He will have his usual supply of Xmas and other literature. Call and see him.

New British Sea Lord Has Been Great Worker And Successful Organizer

THOUGH it seems to be generally supposed that the loss of three British destroyers off the Dutch coast was responsible for the retirement of Sir John Jellicoe as First Sea Lord, the Mail and Empire suggested that the comparatively trifling cause was hardly commensurate with the extremely important effect. No navy can expect to escape losses, and to retire Jellicoe because three destroyers were sunk would be much like retiring Haig because of a successful German raid on the British trenches.

The future historian will not say that Jellicoe was a failure as head of the British navy; he is more likely to point out that in his patriotic and characteristic determination to become familiar with all the minutiae of the British sea forces he simply broke down his health. It does not seem probable that Sir Rosslyn Wemyss will inaugurate a new policy with regard to handling the British navy. The difference will be that since he is a man of different temperament from Jellicoe, he will be able to remain First Sea Lord and still stand under the strain. It is said that Wemyss is a born organizer. The officer above quoted says: "He is the shrewdest judge of a man's capabilities I know." He picks his assistants with the greatest care, but once having chosen them he lets them handle their own departments with little or no interference, a policy which has proved successful in business, and also in war. Instead of worrying as to whether his subordinates are doing their work properly he does his worrying before he chooses them. Thereafter they are permitted to do the worrying.

Sir Rosslyn Wemyss was born in Wemyss Castle, Fife, Scotland, April 12, 1864, his father being Sir Rosslyn Erskine Wemyss, and his mother the only daughter of the late Sir Robert Morier, G.C.B., a well-known English diplomat who matched his wits more than once with Bismarck. It is said, indeed, that he was the first British diplomat to perceive the peril to the rest of Europe of the empire that Bismarck was building up. The First Sea Lord was afloat almost from the cradle, fishing and sailing being his favorite sports. He entered the navy in 1877 as an ensign, became a lieutenant ten years later, a commander in 1898 and a captain in 1901. He was appointed rear admiral in 1911, and was made vice admiral at the time he went to the East Indian appointment a year ago. He was sent to the Mediterranean shortly after war broke out, but was recalled to the grand fleet because his specialty was the handling of big ships. As commander of one of the naval units, he took part in the Battle of Jutland, and was mentioned in despatches for his fine work.

Sir Rosslyn Wemyss is known as a "big ship" man. That is to say, he is an exponent of the theory that the strength of the navy depends upon the number of dreadnoughts and super-dreadnoughts that can be put in the line of battle. Shortly before the war he commanded the Orion, one of the largest of them, and a unit in the second squadron, which was composed of Britain's newest and biggest ships. He was second in command of this squadron, for whose fine discipline and appearance he was given much credit. He was an enthusiast upon discipline and also on gunnery, but his fine open nature and jolly manners made working with him or under him a pleasure. "A man more truly imbued with a love and interest in his profession never lived," says the British officer.

Win the War By Preparing the Land Sowing the Seed and Producing Bigger Crops

Work in Joint Effort the Soil of the U. S. and Canada—Co-operative Farming in Man Power Necessary to Win the Battle for Liberty.

The Food Controllers of the United States and Canada are asking for greater food production. Scarcely 100,000,000 bushels of wheat can be sent to the allies overseas before the crop harvest. Upon the efforts of the United States and Canada rests the burden of supply.

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute; Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist.

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seeding operations.

Canada's Wheat Production last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels; the demand from Canada alone, for 1918, is 400,000,000 Bushels.

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land, but needs the men. The Government of the United States wants every man who can effectively help to do farm work this year. It wants the land in the United States developed first of course; but it also wants to help Canada. Whenever we find a man we can spare to Canada's fields after ours are supplied, we want to direct him there. Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than April 5th. Wages to competent help, $50 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board, and find comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundary points to destination and return.

A Ford Car Takes the Place of all These Things

WHEN you own a Ford you can do away with many articles that are a source of continuous expense to the man who still drives a horse. For instance, not only your driving-horse and buggy, but the single harness, blankets, whips, currycombs, brushes, horse-shoes, pitch-forks, feed-bins, etc.

In their place you have a speedy, dependable, dignified, roomy Ford Car—complete in itself. It is vastly superior to the narrow, cramped buggy that travels so slowly. And when a Ford is standing idle it does not eat three meals a day, and it requires no "looking after."

A Ford will save you time, trouble, and money. It is the utility car for the busy farmer and his family.

*A Tale of Youth and Summer
Time and The Baxter Family Especially William*

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Copyright, 1915, 1916, by Metropolitan Magazine.

There was only one place in town where evening clothes were rented, and the suspicious persons in charge had insisted that William obtain from his father a guarantee to insure the return of the garments in perfect condition. So that was hopeless. And wasn't it better also to wear clothes which had known only one previous occupant, as was the case with Mr. Beljus' offering, than to hire what chance hundreds had hired? Finally, there was only one thing to be considered, and this was the fact that William had to have those clothes.

"Six minutes," said Mrs. Baxter, glancing implacably at her watch. "When it's ten I'll telephone."

CHAPTER XVII.

Youth and Mr. Parcher.

AND the end of it was, of course, victory for the woman—victory both moral and physical. Three-quarters of an hour later she was unbundling the contents of the two baskets and putting the things back in place, illuminating these actions with an expression of strong distaste in spite of broken assurances that Mr. Beljus had not more than touched any of the articles offered to him for valuation.

At dinner, which was unusually early that evening, Mrs. Baxter did not often glance toward her son. She kept her eyes from that white face and spent most of her time in urging upon Mr. Baxter that he should be prompt in dressing for a card club meeting which he and she were to attend that evening.

William retired to his own room, where he lay upon his bed in the darkness. He heard the evening noises of the house faintly through the closed door—voices and the clatter of metal and china from the faraway kitchen, Jane's laugh in the hall, the opening and closing of the doors. Then his father seemed to be in distress about something. William heard him complaining to Mrs. Baxter, and, though the words were indistinct, the tone was vigorously plaintive.

Everything was quiet now. The open window showed as a greenish oblong set in black, and William knew that in a little while there would come through the stillness of that window the distant sound of violins. And as he lay on his dreary bed he thought of brightly lighted rooms where other boys were dressing eagerly, faces and hair shining, hearts beating high—boys brighter than coronation robes, fairer than Joseph's holy coat, it lay!

"Why, it's layin' right on her bed this very minute!"

As a hurried worldling in almost perfectly fitting evening clothes passed out of his father's gateway and hurried toward the place whence faintly came the sound of dance music a child's voice called sweetly from an unidentified window of the darkened house behind him:

"Well, anyway, you try an' have a good time, Willie!"

Jane's friendly but ill chosen "anyway" had touched doubts already annoying him. He was certain to be late to the party—so late, indeed, that it might prove difficult to obtain a proper number of dances with the sacred girl in whose honor the celebration was being held.

But as he hastened onward his spirits rose, and he did reply to Jane, after all, though he had placed a hundred yards between them.

"Yes, and you can bet your bottom dollar I will too!" he muttered between his determined teeth.

Spellbound groups of uninvited persons, most of them colored, rested their forearms upon the rail of the Parchers' picket fence, offering to William's view a silhouette like that of a crowd at a fire. Beyond the fence bright forms went skimming, shimmering, wavering over a white platform, while high overhead the young moon sprayed a thinner light down through the maple leaves to where processions of rosy gables hung floating in the blue night er as William passed on toward the dancers. "What's he think he's imitating—Henry Irving? Look at his walk!"

"He walks that way a good deal lately, I've noticed," said Mrs. Parcher in a tired voice. "So do Joe Bullitt and"—

"He didn't even come to say good evening to you," Mr. Parcher interrupted. "Talk about manners nowadays! These young!"

"He didn't see us."

"Well, we're used to that," said Mr. Parcher. "None of 'em sees us. They've worn holes in all the cane seated chairs, they've scuffed up the whole house, and I haven't been able to sit down anywhere downstairs for three months without sitting on some dam boy. But they don't even know we're alive! Well, thank the Lord, it's over—after tonight!" His voice became reflective. "That Baxter boy was the worst until he took to coming in the daytime when I was downtown. I couldn't have stood it if he'd kept on coming in the evening. If I'd had to listen to any more of his talking or singing either the embalmer or the lunatic asylum would have had me, sure! I see he's got hold of his daddy's dress suit again for tonight."

"Is it Mr. Baxter's dress suit?" Mrs. Parcher inquired. "How do you know?"

Mr. Parcher smiled. "How I happen to know is a secret," he said. "I forgot about that. His little sister, Jane, told me that Mrs. Baxter had hidden it, or something, so that Willie couldn't wear it, but I guess Jane wouldn't mind my telling you that she told me, especially as they're letting him use it again tonight. I suppose he feels grander'n the king o' Siam!"

"No," Mrs. Parcher returned thoughtfully. "I don't think he does just now." Her gaze was fixed upon the dancing platform, which most of the dancers were abandoning as the music fell away to an interval of silence. In the center of the platform there remained one group, consisting of Miss Pratt and five orators, and of the orators the most impassioned and gesticulative was William.

"They all seem to want to dance with her all the time," said Mrs. Parcher. "I heard her telling one of the boys half an hour ago that all she could give him was either the twenty-eighth regular dance or the sixteenth 'extra.'"

Nothing could have been more evident than William's difficulties. They continued to exist with equal obviousness when the group broke up in some confusion after a few minutes of animated discussion, Mr. Wallace Banks, that busy and executive youth, bearing Miss Pratt triumphantly off to the lemonade punch bowl, while William pursued Johnnie Watson and Joe Bullitt.

"Now you look here, Johnnie," William said vehemently, "and you listen too, Joe! You both got seven dances apiece with her, anyway, all on account of my not getting here early enough, and you got to"—

"It wasn't because of any such reason," young Mr. Watson protested. "I asked her for mine two days ago."

"Well, that wasn't fair, was it?" William cried. "Just because I never thought of sneaking in ahead like that, you go and"—

"Well, you ought to thought of it," Johnnie retorted, jerking his arm free of William's grasp. "I can't stand here gabbin' all night!" And he hurried away.

But the music sounded for the dance, and Joe felt that it was time to end this uncomfortable conversation. "I got to go, Bill," he said. "I got to go!"

"Wait just one minute," William pleaded. "I want to say just this: I

"Here!" exclaimed Mr. Bullitt. "I got to go!"

"I know it. That's why"

the words were indistinct, the tone was vigorously plaintive.

Everything was quiet now. The open window showed as a greenish oblong set in black, and William knew that in a little while there would come through the stillness of that window the distant sound of violins. And as he lay on his dreary bed he thought of brightly lighted rooms where other boys were dressing eagerly, faces and hair shining, hearts beating high—boys who would possess this last evening and the "last waltz together," the last smile and the last sigh.

Now arrived that moment he had most painfully anticipated, and dance music drifted on the night, but there came a tapping upon his door, and a soft voice spoke.

"Will-ee?"

With a sharp exclamation William swung his legs over the edge of the bed and sat up. Of all things he desired not he desired no conversation with or on the part of Jane. But he had forgotten to lock his door. The handle turned, and a dim little figure marched in.

"Willie, Adelia's goin' to put me to bed."

"You g'way from here," he said huskily. "I haven't got time to talk to you. I'm busy."

"Well, you can wait a minute, can't you?" she asked reasonably. "I haf to tell you a joke on mamma."

"I don't want to hear any jokes."

"Well, I haf to tell you this one 'cause she told me to. Oh!" Jane clapped her hand over her mouth and jumped up and down, offering a fantastic silhouette against the light of the open door. "Oh, oh, oh!"

"What's matter?"

"She said I mustn't, mustn't tell that she told me to tell! My goodness! I forgot that! Mamma took me off alone right after dinner, an' she told me to tell you this joke on her a little after she an' papa had left the house but she said, 'Above all things,' she said, 'don't let Willie know I said to tell him.' That's just what she said, an' here that's the very first thing I had to go an' do!"

"Well, what of it?"

Jane quieted down. "Did you hear what a fuss papa was makin' when he was dressin' for the card party?"

"I don't care if!"

"He had to go in his reg'lar clo'es," whispered Jane triumphantly. "An' this is the joke on mamma: You know that tailor that let papa's dress suit 'way out? Well, mamma thinks that tailor must think she's crazy or somep'n 'cause she took papa's dress suit to him last Monday to get it pressed for this card party, an' she guesses he must of understood her to tell him to do lots besides just pressin' it. Anyway, he went an' altered it, an' he took it 'way, 'way in again. An' this afternoon when it came back it was even tighter'n what it was in the first place, an' papa couldn't begin to get into it!"

"Well, an' so it's all pressed an' ev'rythin', an' she stopped on the way out an' whispered to me that she'd got so upset over the joke on her that she couldn't remember where she put it when she took it out o' papa's room after he gave up tryin' to get inside of it. An' that," cried Jane—"that's the funniest thing of all! Why, it's layin' right on her bed this very minute!"

In one bound William leaped through the open door. Two seconds sufficed for his passage through the hall to his mother's bedroom, and there, neatly spread upon the lace coverlet and spelledbound groups of uninverted persons, most of them colored, rested their forearms upon the rail of the Parcher's picket fence, offering to William's view a silhouette like that of a crowd at a fire. Beyond the fence bright forms went skimming, shimmering, wavering over a white platform, while high overhead the young moon sprayed a thinner light down through the maple leaves to where processions of rosy globes hung floating in the blue night.

Yonder—somewhere in the breath taking radiance—danced his queen with all her court about her. Queen and court, thought William, and nothing less exorbitant could have expressed his feeling.

A sense of picturesqueness—his own picturesqueness—made him walk rather theatrically as he passed through the groups of humble onlookers outside the picket fence. Many of these turned to stare at the belated guest, and William was unconscious of neither their low estate nor his own quality as a patrician man about town in almost perfectly fitting evening dress. A faint, cold smile was allowed to appear upon his lips, and a fragment from a story he had read came momentarily to his mind—"Through the gaping crowds the young Augustan noble was borne down from the Palatine, scornful in his jeweled litter." ***

An admiring murmur reached William's ear. "Oh, oh, honey, look at them long tail suits! 'At's a rich boy, honey!"

"Yessum, so! Bet he got his pockets pack' full o' twenty dollar gold pieces right iss minute!"

"You right, honey!"

William allowed the coldness of his faint smile to increase—to become scornful. These poor sidewalk creatures little knew what seethed inside the alabaster of the young Augustan noble! What was it to them that this was Miss Pratt's last night and that he intended to dance and dance with her, on and on?

Upon one of the posts of the gateway there rested the elbow of a contemplative man, middle aged or a little worse. Of all persons having pleasure or business within the bright inclosure he was that evening the least important, being merely the background parent who paid the bills—Mr. Parcher.

One subject was preoccupying both Mr. Parcher and William, their two views, though again founded upon one thought, had no real congeniality. The preoccupying subject was the imminence of Miss Pratt's departure. Neither Mr. Parcher nor William forgot it for an instant. No matter what else played upon the surface of their attention, each kept saying to himself underneath: "This is the last night—the last night! Miss Pratt is going away—going away tomorrow!"

The unuttered words advanced tragically toward the gate in the head of William at the same time that they moved contentedly away in the head of Mr. Parcher, for Mr. Parcher caught sight of his wife just then and went to join her as she sank wearily upon the front steps.

"Taking a rest for a minute?" he inquired. "By George, we're both entitled to a good, long rest after tonight! If we could afford it we'd go away to a quiet little sanitarium in the hills somewhere, and—" His staring eyes followed the movements of a stately young form entering the gateway. "Look at it!" said Mr. Parcher in a whisper. "Just look at it!"

"Look at what?" asked his wife.

"That Baxter boy!" said Mr. Parcher.

"It wasn't because of any such reason," young Mr. Watson protested. "I asked her for mine two days ago."

"Well, that wasn't fair, was it?" William cried. "Just because I never thought of sneaking in ahead like that, you go and—"

"Well, you ought to thought of it," Johnnie retorted, jerking his arm free of William's grasp. "I can't stand here gabbin' all night!" And he hurried away.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Miss Boks.

"JOE," William began, fastening more securely upon Mr. Bullitt—"Joe, I've done a good many favors for you, and—"

"I've got to see a man," Mr. Bullitt interrupted. "Lemme go, Silly Bill. There's somebody I got to see right away, before the next dance begins. I got to! Honest I have!"

William seized him passionately by the lapels of his coat. "Listen, Joe. For goodness' sake can't you listen a minute? You got to give me!"

"Honest, Bill," his friend expostulated, backing away as forcefully as possible. "I got to find a fellow that's here tonight and ask him about some thing important before!"

"Ye gods! Can't you wait a minute?" William cried, keeping his grip upon Joe's lapels. "You got to give me anyway two out of all your dances with her! You heard her tell me your self that she'd be willing if you or Johnnie or—"

"Well, I only got five or six with her and a couple extras. Johnnie's go-seven. Why'n't you go after Johnnie. I bet he'd help you out, all right, if you kept after him. What you want to pester me for, Bill?"

William swallowed, and, increasing the affectionate desperation of his clutch upon Mr. Bullitt's lapels, "Joe," he began huskily—"Joe, if I'd got six reg'lar and two extras with Miss Pratt her last night here, and you got here late, and it wasn't your fault—I couldn't help being late, could I? I wasn't my fault I was late, I guess was it? Well, if I was in your place I wouldn't act the way you and Johnnie do—not in a thousand years I wouldn't! I'd say: 'You want a couple o' my dances with Miss Pratt, ole man! Why, certainly!'"

"Yes, you would!" was the cynical comment of Mr. Bullitt, whose averted face and reluctant shoulders indicated a strong desire to conclude the interview. "Tonight especially!" he added.

"Look here, Joe," said William desperately. "don't you realize that this is the very last night Miss Pratt's going to be in this town?"

"You bet I do!" These words, though vehement, were inaudible, being formed in the mind of Mr. Bullitt, but, for diplomatic reasons, not projected upon the air by his vocal organs.

William continued, "Joe, you and I have been friends ever since you and I were boys." He spoke with emotion, but Joe had no appearance of being favorably impressed. "And when I look back," said William, "I expect I've done more favors for you than I ever have for any oth—"

But Mr. Bullitt briskly interrupted this appealing reminiscence. "Listen here, Silly Bill," he said, becoming all at once friendly and encouraging—"Bill, there's other girls here you can get dances with. There's one or two of 'em sittin' around in the yard. You can have a bully time even if you did come late." And, with the air of discharging happily all the obligations of which William had reminded him, he

But the music sounded for the dance, and Joe felt that it was in time to end this uncomfortable conversation. "I got to go, Bill," he said.

And, evading a hand which sought to clutch him, he departed hotly.

Mr. Parcher's voice expressed a der a little later as he recommended his wife to turn her gaze in the direction of "that Baxter boy" again. "look at him!" said Mr. Parcher. "face has got more genuine idiocy than I've seen around here yet. God knows I've been seeing some acies in that line this summer!"

"He's looking at Lola Pratt," Mrs. Parcher.

"Don't you suppose I can see th Mr. Parcher returned, with some tation. "That's what's the tre with him. Why don't he quit look at her?"

"I think probably he feels bad cause she's dancing with one of other boys," said his wife mildly.

"Then why can't he dance with s body else himself," Mr. Parcher quired testily, "instead of stan around like a calf looking out of butcher's wagon? By George, he l as if he was just going to moo!"

"Of course he ought to be dan with somebody," Mrs. Parcher re ned thoughtfully. "There are on two more girls than boys here. he's the only boy not dancing. I lieve I'll"— And, not stopping to plete the sentence, she rose and v ed across the interval of grass to liam. "Good evening, William," said pleasantly. "Don't you wait dance?"

"Ma'am?" said William blankly the eyes he turned upon her glassy with anxiety.

"Don't you want to dance?" Parcher repeated. "Have you lo around for a girl without a partn "Girl?" he echoed in a tone of f inquiry.

fused him greater originality. But the vital part of his intended excuse remained unspoken, being disregarded and cut short, as millions of other masculine diplomacies have been throughout the centuries by the decisive action of ladies.

Miss Boke had been sitting under the maple tree for a long time—so long, indeed, that she was acquiring a profound distaste for forestry and even for maple sirup. In fact, her state of mind was as desperate in its way as William's. And when a hostess leads a youth in almost perfectly fitting conventional black toward a girl who has been sitting alone through dance after dance that girl knows what that youth is going to have to do.

It must be confessed for Miss Boke that her eyes had been upon William from the moment Mrs. Parcher addressed him. She sprang to her feet and met Mrs. Parcher more than halfway.

"Oh, Mrs. Parcher!" she called, coming forward.

"I got!"—the panic stricken William again hastily began. "I got to!"—

"Oh, Mrs. Parcher," cried Miss Boke.
"I've been so worried! There's a candle in that Japanese lantern just overhead, and I think it is going out."

"I'll run and get a fresh one in a minute," said Mrs. Parcher, smiling benevolently and retaining William's arm with a little difficulty. "We were just coming to find you. I've brought!"

"I got to—I got to find a m"—William made a last stricken effort.

"Miss Boke, this is Mr. Baxter," said Mrs. Parcher, and she added, with what seemed to William hideous gar-rulity: "He and you both came late,
dear, and he hasn't any dances engaged either. So run and dance and have a nice time together."

The full horror of his position was revealed to William in the relieved, confident, proprietor's smile of Miss Boke, for William lived by a code from which no previous experience had taught him any means of escape. Mrs.
Parcher had made the statement, so needless and so ruinous, that he had no engagements, and in his dismay he had been unable to deny this fatal truth. He had been obliged to let it stand.

He had to give form to the fatal invitation. "M'av' this dance 'thyou?"
he muttered doggedly.

"Vurry pleased to!" Miss Boke responded, whereupon they walked in silence to the platform, stepped upon its surface and embraced.

They made a false start, then another. They stood swaying to catch the time, then made another. After that they tried again and were saved from a fall only by spasmodic and noticeable contortions.

Miss Boke laughed tolerantly, as if forgiving William for his awkward-ness, and his hot heart grew hotter

William threw a wild glance about him, looking for other girls, but the tireless orchestra began to play the encore, and Miss Boke, who had been applauding, instantly cast herself upon his bosom. "Come on!" she cried.
"Don't let's miss a second of it. It's just glorious!"

When the encore was finished she seized William's arm and, mentioning that she'd left her fan upon the chair under the maple tree, added: "Come on! Let's go get it quick!"

Under the maple tree she fanned herself and talked of her love for dancing until the music sounded again.
"Come on!" she cried then. "Don't let's miss a second of it! It's just glorious!"

And, grasping his arm, she propelled him toward the platform with a merry little rush.

So passed five dances—long, long dances.

Likewise five encores—long encores.
After each dance Miss Boke conducted him back to the maple tree, aloof from the general throng, and William found the intermissions almost equal to his martyrdom upon the platform.
But, as there was a barely perceptible balance in their favor, he collected some fragments of his broken spirit when Miss Boke would have borne him to the platform for the sixth time and begged to "sit this one out," although that he had tried of turned his bit of gossip added somewhat to the already sufficient anxieties of William's evening.

"Up at the lake," Miss Boke chattered on, "we got to use the hotel dining room for the hops. It's a floor, a good deal like this floor is tonight—just about oily enough and as nice a floor as I ever danced on. We have awfully good times up at the lake.
'Course there aren't so many Men up there like there are here tonight, and I must say I am glad to get a chance to dance with a Man again! I told you you'd dance all right once we got started, and look at the way it's turned out! Our steps just suit exactly! If I must say it, I could scarcely think of anybody I ever met I'd rather dance with. When anybody's step suits in with mine that way, why, I love to dance straight through an evening with one person, the way we're doing."

"Yes," William reflected, "it had to be me!" With all the crowd to choose from, Mrs. Parcher had to go and pick on him! All, all the others went about free as air, sitting from girl to girl—girls that danced like girls! All, all except William danced with Miss Pratt!

What Miss Pratt had offered him was a choice between the thirty-second dance and the twenty-first extra. That was what he had to look forward to—the thirty-second regular or the twenty-first extra!

Kansas City if I hadn't let you go on with us? Ole man, if you— But the music sounded for the next dance, and Joe felt that it was indeed time to end this uncomfortable conversation. "I got to go, Bill," he said, "got to!"

"Wait just one minute," William implored. "I want to say just this: If—" "Here!" exclaimed Mr. Bullitt. "Get to go!"

"I know it. That's why!"

Headless of remonstrance, Joe renched himself free, for it would have taken a powerful and ruthless man to detain him longer. "What you ke me for?" he demanded indignantly. "I got this with Miss Pratt!"

And, evading a hand which still ought to clutch him, he departed swiftly.

Mr. Parcher's voice expressed worry a little later as he recommended a wife to turn her gaze in the direction of "that Baxter boy" again. "Just ok at him!" said Mr. Parcher. "His ce has got more genuine idiocy in it an I've seen around here yet, and od knows I've been seeing some mirles in that line this summer!"

"He's looking at Lola Pratt," said Mrs. Parcher.

"Don't you suppose I can see that?" Mr. Parcher returned, with some irritation. "That's what's the trouble with him. Why don't he quit looking her?"

"I think probably he feels bad because she's dancing with one of the her boys," said his wife mildly.

"Then why can't he dance with somebody else himself?" Mr. Parcher inquired testily, "instead of standing around like a calf looking out of the itcher's wagon? By George, he looks like he was just going to moo!"

"Of course he ought to be dancing with somebody," Mrs. Parcher remarked thoughtfully. "There are one or two more girls than boys here, and he's the only boy not dancing. I believe I'll— And, not stopping to complete the sentence, she rose and walked across the interval of grass to William. "Good evening, William," she said pleasantly. "Don't you want to dance?"

"Ma'am?" said William blankly, and as eyes he turned upon her were assy with anxiety.

"Don't you want to dance?" Mrs. Parcher repeated. "Have you looked round for a girl without a partner?"

"Girl?" he echoed in a tone of feeble inquiry.

She smiled and nodded, taking his arm. "You come with me," she said, "I'll fix you up."

William suffered her to conduct him across the yard. Intensely preoccupied with what he meant to do as soon as the music paused, he was somewhat dazed, but when he perceived that he was being led in the direction of a girl sitting solitary under one of the apple trees the sudden shock of fear aroused his faculties.

"What—where?" he stammered, halting and seeking to detach himself from his hostess.

"What is it?" she asked.

"I got—I got to!"— William unsilently. "I got to!"

His purpose was to excuse himself from the ground that he had to find a man and tell him something important before the next dance, for in the conwith that injustice. A coarse chuckle, a half suppressed snort, assailed William's scarlet ear, and from the corner of his eye he caught a glimpse of Joe Bullitt gliding by, suffused, while over Joe's detested shoulder could be seen the adorable and piquant face of the one girl, also suffused.

"Doggone it!" William panted.

"Oh, you mustn't be discouraged with yourself," said Miss Boke genially. "I've met lots of Men that had trouble to get started and turned out to be right good dancers, after all. It seems to me we're kind of workin' against each other. I'll tell you, you kind of let me do the guiding and I'll get you going fine. Now! One, two, one, two! There!"

William ceased to struggle for dominance, and their efforts to "get started" were at once successful. He had a helpless feeling, fully warranted by the circumstances. He soon became aware that Miss Boke's powerful "guiding" was observed by the public, for after one collision, more severe than others, a low voice hissed in his ear:

"She won't hurt you much, Silly Bill. She's only in fun!"

This voice belonged to the dancer with whom he had just been in painful contact, Johnnie Watson.

"I just love dancing," said Miss Boke serenely. "Don't you, Mr. Baxter?"

"What?" he gulped. "Yeh."

"It's lovely," she murmured. "I hope they don't play 'Home, Sweet, Home' very early at parties in this town. I could keep on like this all night!"

CHAPTER XIX.

Marooned.

TO the gasping William it seemed that she already had kept on like this all night, and he expressed himself in one great, frank, agonized moan of relief when the music stopped. "I sh' think musicians'd be dead!" he said as he wiped his brow. And, then discovering that May Parcher stood at his elbow, he spoke hastily to her. "M'av' the next 'thou?"

But Miss Parcher had begun to applaud the musicians for an encore. She shook her head. "Next's the third extra," she said. "And, anyhow, this one's going to be encored now. You can have the twenty-second if there is any."

dances.

Likewise five encores—long encores. After each dance Miss Boke conducted him back to the maple tree, aloof from the general throng, and William found the intermissions almost equal to his martyrdom upon the platform. But, as there was a barely perceptible balance in their favor, he collected some fragments of his broken spirit when Miss Boke would have borne him to the platform for the sixth time and begged to "sit this one out," alleging that he had "kind of turned his ankle or something," he believed.

The cordial girl at once placed him upon the chair and gallantly procured another for herself. In her solicitude she sat close to him, looking fondly at his face, while William, though now and then rubbing his ankle for plausibility's sake, gazed at the platform with an expression which Gustave Dore would gratefully have found suggestive. Upon the many colored platform the ineffable One drifted to and fro, back and forth, her little blond head, in a golden net, glinting here and there like a bit of tinsel blowing across a flower garden.

And when that dance and its encore were over she went to lean against a tree, while Wallace Banks fanned her, but she was so busy with Wallace that she did not notice William, though she passed near enough to waft a breath of violet scent to his wan nose. A fragment of her silver speech tinkled in his ear:

"Oh, Wallie Banks, bid pid s'ant have Bruvva Josie-Joe's dance 'less Joe say so! Lola mus' be fair. Wallie musn't!"

"That's that Miss Pratt," observed Miss Boke, following William's gaze with some interest. "You met her yet?"

"Yeh," said William.

"She's been visiting here all summer," Miss Boke informed him. "I was at a little tea this afternoon, and some of the girls said this Miss Pratt said she'd never dream of getting engaged to any man that didn't have $750,000. I don't know if it's true or not, but I expect so. Anyway, they said they heard her say so."

William lifted his right hand from his ankle and passed it time after time across his damp forehead. He did not believe that Miss Pratt could have expressed herself in so mercenary a manner, but if she had—well, one fact in British history had so impressed him that he remembered it even after examination: William Pitt, the younger, had been prime minister of England at twenty-one. Undoubtedly Miss Boke's

"Yes," William reflected, "it had to be me!" With all the crowd to choose from, Mrs. Parcher had to go and pick on him! All, all the others went about free as air, sitting from girl to girl—girls that danced like girls! All, all except William danced with Miss Pratt!

What Miss Pratt had offered him was a choice between the thirty-second dance and the twenty-first extra. That was what he had to look forward to—the thirty-second reg'lar or the twenty-first extra!

Meanwhile, merely through eternity, he was sealed unto Miss Boke.

The tie that bound them oppressed him as if it had been an ill omened matrimony, and he sat beside her like an unwilling old husband. All the while Miss Boke had no appreciation whatever of her companion's real condition, and when little, spasmodic, sinister changes appeared in his face, as they certainly did from time to time, she attributed them to pains in his ankle.

So they danced again and again.

When the fourteenth dance came, about half an hour before midnight, they were still dancing together.

A Wonderful Island.

White Island, thirty miles distant from New Zealand, is probably the most extraordinary island in the world. It is an enormous mass of rock nearly three miles in circumference, rising 900 feet above the sea, and is perpetually enveloped in dark clouds, which are visible for nearly 100 miles.

The island consists almost entirely of sulphur, with a small percentage of gypsum. Some years ago an attempt was made to float a company to work the sulphur, which is of high quality; but, strange to say, sufficient capital was not subscribed. Therefore, the export of sulphur from White Island is still very small.

In the interior is a lake fully fifty acres in extent, the water of which has a temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit, and is strongly impregnated with acids. On one side of this lake are craters from which steam escapes with great force and noise. This steam and the vapor from the lake form the dark cloud which envelops the island.—Tit-Bits.

HOW TO MAKE COMPOST HEAP

Not Usually Economical Where General Farming Is Practiced—Too Much Work Required.

Composting manure is not usually economical where general farming is done. It requires too much labor; besides, the manure will ordinarily give better results when scattered directly on the ground and plowed or harrowed in. It is advised only where coarse materials need to be put in better condition. It is also advisable for truckers and gardeners.

By the compost heap the farmer is able to multiply his available manure manyfold. He should remember that anything of vegetable or animal origin is a valuable fertilizer if put in proper condition. The compost heap is one means of doing this. One ton of leaves contains 15 pounds of nitrogen, 32 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 6 pounds of potash.

In actual practice it is safe to assume that half of their values are available; but it is only after undergoing decomposition that these values are available.

Locate the compost heap in an old shed, or build a shed, with any kind of cheap material for a roof. Spread on the ground a layer of stable manure 8 by 10 feet, 6 inches deep. Over this spread 100 pounds of acid phosphate, or ground phosphate rock. The phosphate rock answers as well as the acid phosphate. Continue these alternate layers until the manure is used up or until the pile has become inconveniently high. To these layers might be added straw, leaves, mold, or other litter, adding 100 pounds ground phosphate rock to each ton of material used. Be sure to wet all thoroughly. When the compost heap is completed, cover it about 4 inches deep with good loam or with forest mold.

When applying 2 tons per acre or less, the best results can be obtained by putting the compost in the furrow and bedding out on it. Be careful not to bury too deep, especially on clay soils. When using more than 2 tons per acre it is better to scatter broadcast.

GREEN MANURES MAKE HUMUS

Cowpeas, Velvet Beans, Clover, Buckwheat and Sorghum Are Good Crops for Purpose.

It has been found beneficial to plow under green crops on depleted soils or soils deficient in humus. Among the best crops for this purpose may be named cowpeas, velvet beans, clover, buckwheat, and sorghum. Ordinarily the crops should be allowed to reach maturity before turning under. It is not a good practice to turn under a heavy green crop immediately before planting another crop, especially small grain.

A cover crop is usually sown late in the season, after the main crop is out of the way. Oats, rye and crimson clover are most commonly used for this purpose. They are sown in the cotton or corn at the time of the last working and make some growth during the autumn and early spring. They serve the double purpose of adding humus

His Sole Anxiety.

Sir Arthur Lee, whose magnificent gift of his country mansion to be residence in perpetuity for British Prime Ministers has recently brought his name prominently before the public, spent some time during his early life mining for gold in the Klondyke.

Concerning his adventures there he has some good stories to tell, one of the best relating to a first-class saloon bar riot between some Polish and Hungarian miners at Dawson City.

It was a racial fight to a finish, the weapons used being iron bar knuckle-dusters, or anything else that came handy, and the spectators including Sir Arthur, discreetly refrained from taking sides.

All except one! And he, needless to say, was an Irishman.

Pushing his way through the throng, Pat marched up to the bar and anxiously enquired of the cowering and frightened attendant:

"O' say, is this a private fight, can anyone join in?"

Champlain Book Sold.

A volume written by Samuel Champlain in 1603 on his exploration in Canada, entitled "Des Sauvages," which was bought several years ago in a book store in Paris, France, for thirty cents, was sold for $3,600 at a book sale in New York a few years after it was published. The explorer discovered Lake Champlain.

Color News and Notes.

If you would be considered moderately subdued your favorite reds and greens advise a fashion authority. Not the point of fadedness, however; from it! Simply soften them into wonderfully beautiful shades. Soft gray-blue lavenders, ashes of rose that old-time favorite, wistaria, a silver gray and lichen grays; of these are the color cards of fashion. If you desire a spice, add a dash of rosy orange or peacock blue, but the smartest costumes are usually of a tone, with the exception perhaps of lining, which may be as gorgeous as you please. Wool embroideries and stitchings are used with effect either in the same shade as the costume or in contrasting colors. The Chinese, Japanese and East Indian influence is plainly felt in the newest designs and colorings. Sometimes they are fairly riot of colors, almost breath-taking in their beauty.

BUILDING UP OF LUCRATIVE HERD

Careful Selection, Breeding and Management Necessary.

PLAN FOR BETTER ANIMALS

Owner of Dairy Should Establish Standard and Reject All Cows Not Meeting It—Raise Only the Best Heifer Calves.

In building up a productive and profitable dairy herd, careful selection, intelligent breeding, and skillful management are necessary. A careful consideration of these fundamentals is sure to result in better animals, and by the use of economy and good judgment the improvement of a herd need not be expensive.

Careful selection is the first step in the building up of a dairy herd, and naturally begins with the elimination of all low producers. Every owner of dairy cows should establish a definite standard, and all cows that do not meet the chief purpose of which is the joint ownership, use, and exchange of high-class, purebred bulls. If skillfully managed, these associations should be eventually the greatest single factor in the upbuilding of our dairy herds.

To build up a valuable and profitable dairy herd, careful and intelligent management must be combined with selection and breeding. Ill treatment and insufficient or unsuitable feed have made many a well-bred and carefully selected herd unprofitable. All cows should be well bred and well fed. It never pays to keep a cow that does not pay a fair return for first-class feed and care.

naturally begins with the elimination of all low producers. Every owner of dairy cows should establish a definite standard, and all cows that do not measure up to it should be rejected. One hundred and fifty pounds of butterfat a year is a fair minimum for most localities. Whether a cow is to be rejected or retained should depend ordinarily on production as shown by the Babcock test and the milk scales. Only the best heifer calves from the most productive cows should be raised.

Have All Cows Tested.

Farmers who are too busy to test their own cows may have this work done now at a nominal cost by joining a cow-testing association. A cow-testing association is an organization of about 25 dairy farmers who employ co-operatively a man to test their cows for economical production.

The bull is half the herd, and if potent, as all good bulls are, he is much more than half the herd. The purebred bull, all of whose ancestors for several generations were first-class individuals, stands very little chance of transmitting the qualities of some inferior remote ancestor. In the dairy record center at Farmers' Union, Ontario, there were 14 herds of grade cattle. Seven of these herds, comprising 82 cows, had always used grade sires. The other seven comprising 84 cows, had used purebred sires for many years. At creamery prices for milk, one year's record showed a balance of $31.51 per cow in favor of the seven herds that had used purebred sires.

Own First-Class Bull.

The owner of a large herd of grade cows can well afford to own a first-class bull, and bull associations are now making it possible for the owner of a small herd to own a share in a good, well-bred bull. A co-operative bull association is a farmers' organization. selected herd unprofitable. All cows should be well bred and well fed. It never pays to keep a cow that does not pay a fair return for first-class feed and care.

Inspect Vegetables in Cellar.

Go over the celery, cabbage and root crops in the cellar and pick out any that are starting to decay.

Plenty of Woods Now.

Every farm has plenty of woods growing any place they get a chance without sewing any more.

CURRANTS AND GOOSEBERRIES

Necessary to Train Both Plants in Bush Form to Avoid Borers of Root and Stalk.

If ease of cultivation were the only consideration in pruning currants and gooseberries, the tree form would certainly be most convenient and economical. Unfortunately the grower has no choice in this matter, for in order to insure his plants against the ravages of borers of the root and stalk it is necessary to train both these plants in a bush form. When managed in this way new wood can annually be induced to spring up from the root to replace any canes which may be destroyed by borers or which may for any other cause become useless to the plant. The new growth should be stopped when it reaches a convenient height, in order to induce the formation of side branches and thus increase the area of bearing wood. This is much more important than would at first appear, because the fruit of these plants is borne upon fruiting spurs which develop from wood two or more years of age. On the other hand, the renewal of the bush is not only necessary in order to maintain it against insect pests, but to insure a supply of fruit-bearing wood to take the place of the old wood which has become unprofitable to maintain.

In general a currant bush should be composed of from five to eight stalks, stopped about 18 to 20 inches in height. If the plants are vigorous, shoots stopped at this height will produce several lateral branches, thus forming a compact, broad-headed bush with a maximum expanse of bearing wood.

The gooseberry should be treated in like fashion, but will be found to require less heading-back, because its normal habit is to produce numerous side shoots rather than strong, upright ones.

Uncle Sam wants to double the production of poultry and eggs next season. Will you do your bit?

Are you doing your share to encourage the production of 6,500,000,000 pounds of eggs that will be needed next season?

They are sown in the cotton or corn at the time of the last working and make some growth during the autumn and early spring. They serve the double purpose of adding humus and of preventing soil erosion. The cover crop should be plowed under at least two weeks before the time for planting the next crop. Green manure crops are helpful in improving the mechanical condition and rendering available the plant food already in the soil.

It is hoped that the value of farm manures has been made sufficiently evident and that more farmers will give attention to the saving of them.

BENEFITS OF TESTING SEED

Indiana County Agent Makes Surprising Discovery in Talk to Farmers—Much Corn Wasted.

A county agent in Indiana was holding a meeting not long ago where the production of corn was being discussed. He found that only 8 per cent of the men attending had tested their seed corn the previous year, but at the close of the meeting when the benefits of good seed corn had been outlined about 40 per cent promised to test their corn before planting this spring. Further questioning among those present brought out the fact that 38 per cent of the corn which had been selected for seed from the crib early last spring just before planting did not grow.

CATTLE ADAPTED TO SOUTH

Pasture Season Is Long and Feed Is Produced at Minimum Cost—Little Shelter Needed.

There is no section of the country which can produce cattle more cheaply than the South, for the lands are still cheap, the grazing is good, the pasture season is long, feed can be produced at a minimum cost, and inexpensive shelter only is required for the animals during the winter months.

JOB FOR FIRST STORMY DAY

Reduce Loss of Young Animals by Infectious Diseases by Cleaning Stables Thoroughly.

A good job for the first rainy day. From 6 to 10 per cent of the young animals are lost each year from such infectious diseases as calf scours, hog cholera, blackleg, contagious abortion, navel ill of sucklings, distemper and other infectious diseases.

Reduce this loss of young animals from infectious diseases by cleaning the stable thoroughly and disinfecting with whitewash to which has been added 2 per cent crude carbolic acid or 5 per cent coal-tar dip. This is easily applied to the walls, ceiling and floors with a spray pump.

POLKA DOTS AND WIDE BRIM

The novel use of polka dots combined with a large inverted brim makes this hat delightfully entrancing. It is designed for the tourist who wishes to bring joy to herself and all beholders, and is fabricated in blue and white satin, with the polka dots as the sole trimming.

SOME SPRING FASHION TIPS

Linen Blouses With High Collar Are Popular—Pumpkin Color Is Worn With Navy Short Jacket Suit.

A swagger linen blouse of white recently seen had a high collar, plaited frills and long bands of rose-colored linen, which were stitched all the way down the upper part of the sleeve. The effect was decidedly new and interesting, observes a fashion writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Very smart and attractive are three-piece or middy suits evolved in silk and cloth combinations, and these have very becoming lines for youthful figures.

Decidedly unique is this idea: Pumpkin yellow handkerchief linen is developed into a mannish, tucked front sleeveless blouse to wear with a navy suit whose jacket is short and boxlike in the latest fashion line.

Effective catstitching in heavy silk is seen for spring.

A lovely shade of amethyst suede draped and clasped with a silver buckle forms the belt on a white velours waistcoat made to go with a short jacket of navy tricotine suit. The result is most pleasing.

Many different colored piques are used for collars and cuffs or lingerie blouses for spring, and this same material forms many of the smart vests and waistcoats made from spring suits.

A delicate gray handkerchief linen is used for some of the most attractive handmade blouses that have arrived from Paris.

FOND OF ORIENTAL THINGS

Women Search Shops for Chinese Embroidery for Decoration of Gowns to Which Richness Is to Be Added.

Women are gleaning in the Oriental departments of the shops for bits of Chinese embroidery to use as trimming. Some of these embroideries are quite modestly priced; all of them show rich and beautiful colorings and sometimes the silks may be matched so that details of the pattern can be repeated by hand here and there on a gown.

Not infrequently, however, strips of embroidery offered at low prices are so worn and shabby that they are scarcely worth buying and no matter how effective the pattern they would detract from rather than add to the smartness of a new gown.

Saving Light.

It is reported in the London Times that notice has been given by the general in command of the Munster army corps district that the consumption of gas and electric power in shops, restaurants and other establishments must this winter not exceed one-half of the consumption in the winter of 1915-16. All the military and civil authorities, businesses and other private undertakings are required to alter their office hours to the time between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Schools will keep the same hours. The lighting of shop windows and the use of passenger elevator are forbidden and all restaurants are to be closed at 9 p.m.—Scientific American.

Starfish are known to contain nearly five per cent. of nitrogen and a small quantity of phosphoric acid. In Japan they are used as a manure.

OUR DEFENSE

In the spring we may be attacked at any moment. Toxic poisons pile up within us after a hard winter, and we feel "run-down," tired out, blue and discouraged. This is the time to put our house in order—cleanse the system and put fresh blood into our arteries. You can obtain an alternative extract from Blood root, Golden Seal, Stone and Queen's root, Cherry bark, rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold by most druggists in fifty-cent vials, as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This blood tonic, in tablet or liquid form, is just what you need for "Spring Fever," for that lack of ambition. It will fill you full of vim, vigor and vitality.

LINDSEY, ONTARIO.—"When my little daughter was five years old her liver was so sluggish that I feared she might be troubled with habitual constipation. I had read a great deal about Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and decided to try it with her, giving her small doses. I found that it not only helped her liver but it also proved to be a splendid tonic, as well. It was such a splendid medicine that I would never hesitate to give it to her again if she needed it, and I take pleasure in recommending it to other mothers whose little ones seem to need a liver regulator and blood maker.—Mrs. LOUISA BEACH, Box 1135.

Fancy Costees for Heues.

Very becoming over a black or some dark-hued frock is a black chiffon cloth or marquisette costee pouching in sacklike manner just above a high waistline and edged with the whitest and flimsiest swansdown.

Silk Jersey Jumpers.

Decidedly charming are the silk jersey jumpers slipped on over perfectly simple plain skirts, and emphasis of outline can be imparted through the simple means of a sash.

PRESENTATION AT WILTON.

On Friday evening last, the P.F.E., and Glee Club combined of Wilton, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. N. Storms, it being the term's closing session. The members took advantage of this occasion and presented their pianist and instructor, Mrs. Storms, with a very fine silk umbrella. Although taken completely by surprise, Mrs. Storms made a suitable reply of thanks. The social gathering throughout the winter had been a great uplift to the people of that section and the fine work will be carried on in succeeding years.

WRIGHT-HARTMAN WEDDING.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at Brock street Methodist parsonage, Kingston, on Wednesday morning, April 17th, when Mary E., daughter of Joseph Hartman, was united in marriage to William N. Wright, of Odessa, Rev. G. Clendinning officiating. The bride looked charming in her travelling suit of blue broadcloth with hat to match. She also wore white furs, the gift of the groom, and a bouquet of white carnations. She was attended by her sister, Miss Minnie, who was attired in a navy blue suit, with hat to match, and wearing pink carnations. The groom was assisted by James Harrison. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a beautiful lavalier and to the best man a scarf pin with pearl settings. The bride was the recipient of many gifts. The happy couple left on the noon train for Montreal and other points. Mr. and Mrs. Wright will reside at Odessa on their return.

GRACE CHURCH CONCERT.

Those who were wise enough to improve the opportunity to attend the Choir Concert in Grace Church on Tuesday night, pronounce it one of the best yet given. Some going far as to say that it was the best. The Part Songs rendered by the choir, in full chorus, showed musical ability and careful training. The work for the evening was beautifully executed by Miss Olive McMillan, Miss Grace Oliver and Mrs. E. Wheatley. Each getting much applause. The latter winning a well deserved encore to which she most generously responded. Piano Solos and Duets were taken part in very efficiently. Miss Hattie Wartman, Miss Ketel son and Mr. Wheatley. We must not forget to mention with much appreciation the Violin Setette who rendered with splendid taste a number each part of the program. A unique feature of this concert were the Readings presented, in her own inimitable way, by Miss Helen Ketchum, A.T.C.M., always encored she always responded most willingly. She will be a welcome visitor when she comes again. The Grace church appreciates very much the work of every one who assisted in making this concert a success. Especial mention may be made of the indefatigable efforts of Mr. and Mrs. B. Elack and Prof. Wheatley.

Good Versus Poor Seed Potatoes.

Experiments were begun at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, 1907 to compare seed of the same varieties of potatoes from various sources in order to learn whether potatoes were better for seed from one part of Canada than from another. The results were very striking the first year the experiment was tried, and the results each year since have shown more and more the great importance of planting seed of strong vitality and free from disease.

"WOMANHOOD"

The Glory of the Nation.

"WOMANHOOD" is the supreme revelation of the three noblest passions in a woman's life.

Rightly called "the Love Epic of the Screen," it depicts the love of a maid for a man, the love of a mother for her child, and the love of a woman for her country.

So vivid is the story—so gripping is the intensity of the action—that it converts to the mind and heart emotions so vital and thoughts so powerful that its presentation will leave its indelible impress on your memory.

"WOMANHOOD" is the film of the hour—

At a time when the big world movements are converging to a greater democracy, this highly dramatic spectacle will be a moulder of sentiment of the country, an inspirer to the people, and perhaps the mightiest force to strike home the imperative needs of the moment.

The TRAIL BLAZER to greater Motor Car Value

From the standpoint of dollar for dollar value there's not a car made which offers more for your money than the famous Chevrolet Four-Ninety A.

Before the Chevrolet was made in Canada, good cars were all high in price.

But our mammoth production and manufacturing efficiency enables us to sell the Chevrolet Four-Ninety A at a price much lower than its value when compared with other makes of cars.

With the surplus power developed by the famous valve-in-head motor the owner of a Four-Ninety A invariably is the "trail blazer."

Standard equipment includes speedometer, electric starting and lighting, ammeter, oil indicator light equipment, one man top, demountable rims, non-skid tires on rear wheels and many features usually looked for in cars much higher in price.
